

Bank Chiefs Hold Meeting

The city of Klamath Falls became headquarters for First National Bank of Oregon Tuesday as executive officers and directors of the statewide banking institution gathered for a board meeting and a round of official visits.

C. B. Stephenson, president, and E. B. Mac Naughton, chairman of the board, headed the group which flew in from Portland this morning on two chartered West Coast Airline planes. The delegation will visit the surrounding agricultural district, be guests for lunch at the Tulana Farms Worden ranch and then call at the three First National branches in this area — downtown, South Sixth Street and at Merrill.

The board will hold its regular monthly business meeting at 3 p.m. at the Winema Hotel and host a dinner party at the Willard Hotel in the evening.

The visiting delegation of business leaders are scheduled to depart for Portland from the Klamath Falls airport at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Malin Chamber Backs OTI Fund

MALIN — The Malin Chamber of Commerce has placed receptacles in all places of business in Malin for contributions to the OTI building fund. This method of collecting funds is being used since there is no bank in Malin, according to James Conroy, chamber president.

Much interest in Oregon Technical Institute has been shown by the Malin community as 17 students from this area have attended OTI since it started. The receptacles will be available for the next three weeks.
