Living Room Just For Parents

By KAY SHERWOOD
NEA Staff Writer

"It isn't always the desire for a 'family' room that firms the determination to enclose a porch, convert a garage or build an addition to expand living space.

Sometimes the plans are made by parents wishing a retreat of their own where they can read, write or visit out of the way of the more turbulent activities of the teen-agers.

For some, it makes good sense to let the living room, which already bears the scars of hard usage, continue as the center of family activities.

An added room with fresh, new furnishings can be planned mainly for quieter, adult living.

In older homes, side porches or sunrooms are often suitable for conversion to modern sitting rooms, in which use of contemporary materials give promise of pleasant living. A favored piece of traditional furniture can be transferred to the room to add warmth and charm.

An example of a sitting room for grownups which is neither stuffy formal nor overly casual has been designed by Manashaw and Daggett.

The color scheme is blue and white. Two shades of blue are used, one a hyacinth tone and the other a paler, sky blue.

The flooring is of vinyl tile, laid in a diagonal checkerboard pattern in those two shades of blue.

No drapes or casement curtains are used. Light and air from the window wall are controlled by Venetian blinds in a new pattern. The slats are a matte white. Along their edges are brush strokes of color; in this case, the designers alternated three slats edged with hyacinth with two slats in the sky blue shade.

The effect when the slats are closed for complete privacy, is a subtle, pleasing, horizontal stripe.

What helps this window treatment and keeps windows from looking too bare are strong pine beams running across the ceiling and down to the floor between windows.

TESSA SHIERE of Toledo, Oregon, right, came to Klamath Falls to serve as installing madam president at the recent installation of Eagles Aerie and Auxiliary. She presents the president's gavel to her daughter, Pat Hageman, whom she installed as madam president of Auxiliary 2090.

The beams are finished in a driftwood gray with a slight blue cast.

The roof of this room is made of translucent plastic panels. Light which filters through the plastic roof-ceiling is again controlled by Venetian blinds set in horizontal tracks between ceiling beams.

The effect obtained is a light and airy one. Wood is used to panel the other walls. Those are of driftwood-finished western pine panels lightened a bit with a touch of blue.

Wood-paneled walls not only make the room seem warmer and cozier, they require practically no special care or periodic redecoration.

In this setting, a big writing desk of Italian Directoire design, antique open arm chairs and a

Franklin stove combine happily with modern sectional sofa which curves around a room corner. The upholstery is a white twill treated to retard soil and resist spots. Toss pillows and the cushion top for a square table repeat the blues of the floor.

STRAW SATCHEL

The straw satchel with leather binding and handles is a handbag style many women cherish for summer. It looks well and wears well, too.

Carol Lynn Deal Bride In Etna Church Service

ETNA—Carol Lynn Deal became the bride of Raymond Eugene Branson on Sunday, June 7, in a double ring ceremony at the First Presbyterian Church in Etna, The Rev. Orval Clay officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack M. Deal of Albany, California. Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Branson of Etna are parents of the bridegroom.

Jack Deal escorted his daughter to the altar. Her afternoon length gown was fashioned of white lace with a sweetheart neckline. Her shoulder length veil was held in place by a cap of seed pearls and she carried a white Bible, gift of her uncle, Rudolph Heil, topped with white rosebuds and stephanotis. The fleur-de-lis lapel watch she wore was originally owned by her great-aunt, Genevieve Sanders of New York.

Carol Hammond, maid of honor, wore a frock of sheer green nylon with matching hat. Sharon Heil of Hayward dressed in a blue nylon dress and Verna Rose Branson, sister of the bridegroom, in lavender, were bridesmaids. They wore matching hats and carried colonial bouquets of white carnations.

Susan Kreuger, flower girl, wore a yellow dress and a flower cap of Marguerite daisies. Albert Branson, the bridegroom's brother, was ring bearer.

Robert Munson of Callahan was best man.

Mrs. Deal, mother of the bride, wore a pink cotton afternoon dress with white accessories. Mrs. Branson selected a lavender cotton dress with which she wore white accessories.

Following the wedding a reception was held in the Masonic Hall which was decorated in a woodland theme. The wedding cake was made by Henry Lincoln, a friend of the bridegroom. Carolyn Ayres was in charge of the guest book and Ardith Smith was at the gift table. Verna Rose Branson and Sharon Heil presided at the punch bowl.

Special guests at the wedding were the bride's grandmother, Mrs. C. Roberts of Oakland and Mrs. Henry Fleck, great-grandmother of the bridegroom. A corsage of white carnations was taken to the bridegroom's step-grandmother, a patient at the Yreka Hospital and flowers from the church were distributed to other patients.

Both young people are graduates of Etna High School. They will reside in Modesto where the bridegroom will attend college.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Jack Deal and children, Benjamin and Trudy Ann; Mr. and Mrs. C. Roberts, Oakland; Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Hansen of Hayward and their grandchildren, Kathy and David Schulte of Portland; George B. Sanders, Albany; Mrs. Maxine Cooke, San Francisco; Mrs. Doris Louvrie and children, San Francisco.

Red Samuelson, grand installing worthy president, installed the new officers for Klamath Falls Aerie. Henry Ketsdever, grand installing conductor, escorted them to their stations.

Presentations were made to Lorna Groves, junior past madame president, by Pat Hageman, madame president, Harold Slaughter, worthy president, presented honors to Cecil Spencer, past worthy president.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting after which dancing was enjoyed by lodge members.

BUY WITH CARE

June brides already are budgeting their household money as they plan their home furnishings. You will be happier and save money in the long run if you buy items you like and can live with. In a rug, for example, select a good durable one that you will be proud to own and use.
