Bermuda will pay philatelic tribute to the 350th anniversary of the shipwreck of the "Sea Venture" which resulted in the first permanent settlement of the Bermudas. Six new stamps of identical design but different values will be released on July 29.

The design features in full color the coats of arms of James I, British monarch at that time, and Queen Elizabeth II, each surmounted by the appropriate crown. The arms are intertwined with the Garter Cord.

The "Sea Venture" was the flagship of a supply fleet sent from England to relieve the starving colony of Virginia under the command of Sir George Somers. The ship was wrecked off the Bermudas in 1609. The tiny coral islands have been under British rule since 1612, eight years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock.

Here's an important notice for first day cover collectors of U.S. stamps.

The first day sale of the 4-cent 49 Star Flag stamp on July 4 will be transferred from Washington, D.C., to Auburn, N.Y. The reason for the switch is that Auburn was the home of William H. Seward, secretary of state in the Lincoln and Johnson cabinets, who was responsible for the purchase of the Alaska Territory from Russia in 1867.

Seward was born in Florida, N.Y., but lived most of his life in Auburn where a citizens' committee is planning a big celebration on July 4.

Collectors are reminded to send their envelopes for first day cancellations of the stamp together with remittance to the Postmaster, Auburn, N.Y., prior to July 4.

Any orders for first day covers already sent to the Washington, D.C., Postmaster will be forwarded by him to the postmaster at Auburn, N.Y.

The new revised edition of Prescott H. Thorp's "Complete Guide to Stamp Collecting" is now off the press. The 1939 edition will give both beginning and more advanced collectors a handy reference guide to the hobby of stamp collecting. Among the subjects covered by this 208-page book are chapters on how to start a stamp collection, the tools you will use, stamp albums and catalogues, collecting as an investment and the finding of rare stamps. Priced at $2.95 the book will be available at stamp dealers, book stores and stamp departments.

Austria has issued a special stamp to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the death of Joseph Hayden, famous composer. The 1.50-schilling brown red stamp depicts a likeness of Hayden.

Sturdy, Budget Items Delight Nursery Set

When your sweet little babe-in-arms takes to his own two feet and begins to assert himself, you'll need to equip him with more "grown-up" playthings.

A sturdy play table to serve as a base for finger painting, modeling clay, and the like, and durable enough to climb on and under, will be a joy to a child for many years.

To help instill neat habits, such as picking up toys, right from the start, some sort of safe toy storage deserves priority, too.

Nursery or playroom equipment can be expensive.

With some ingenuity, however, you can make your own. Items will cost very little but will offer good service.

A play table made by a friend of mine is actually a child's version of one she made for an invalid who wanted a strong table high enough to slide over the arms of a chair.

The component parts of the table are plywood, plastic, plumbing pipes, flanges and suitable decoration.

Don't make the top too dinky in size. A table of generous size will permit more flexibility now and later. A piece of plywood 24 inches by 36 inches makes a top big enough for almost any project.

It can be painted, papered or covered with plastic, pulled taut and stapled to the underside.

For the baby years, you could decorate it with pictures such as those you can cut from baby food cereal packages. Glue them down and give them a protective covering of a clear shellac.

It's simple enough to replace them with others if they become soiled.

At school age, the top could be decorated with maps or pictures. To fit the top with legs, get four pipe flanges with threaded collars and fasten them underneath at the four corners. Into these may be screwed any length of pipe, but a 24-inch height is about right for a child's table. Paint the legs a pretty color and push furniture glides into the open end of the pipe, or cap the tips with rubber.

An ingenious idea for a toy storage drawer that costs practically nothing for material was dreamed up by a young mother I know for her 18-month-old explorer.

The baby liked the mystery of bureau drawers and their contents and managed to strew mom's things around often.

To help solve the problem, the mother made baby a drawer of her own to keep her treasures in.

The bonus is that the baby is learning without protest to pick up her toys and put them away after play.

The drawer is easily made from two cardboard boxes of different size. The front side of the larger box is cut out and the smaller box can then be pulled out, drawer-fashion.

The inside edges are reinforced with plastic tape. The outside is dressed with colored paper—self-adhesive plastic covering would work as well—and a gay parade of toy soldiers made from strips of plastic tape in bright, primary colors decorate the box.

The soldier on the front has a cherry-red wood nose which doubles as a drawer knob.

The corrugated boxes have stood an amazing amount of strain—little Susan, the owner, climbs on her drawer, too—even though her mother expected to make replacements more often.
