Area Woman Given Post

Mrs. William Rajnus of Malin has been appointed contest director for the Klamath Basin area for this year's Make It Yourself With Wool contest.

The annual contest, sponsored by the Wool Bureau and the Oregon Wool Growers Auxiliary, is open to all girls between the ages of 14 and 22.

Entrants have only to make a dress, suit or ensemble of their choice of all wool material. Entry blanks are available by calling or writing to Mrs. Rajnus or may be picked up at local department and notions stores.

There are numerous district, state and national prizes which include scholarships, United States Savings Bonds, Singer sewing machines, and a two-week trip to Europe for the national grand prize winners in the junior and senior divisions.

The purpose of the contest is educational. It encourages home sewing and points up the advantages of sewing with wool.

Entries will be accepted until October 18 when the district finals will be held in Klamath Falls. State finals are slated for later in the fall and the national finals for next January at San Antonio, Texas.

Police Seek Girl's Killer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A vast manhunt spread across two states today for a man whose bloody fingerprints were found beside the raped and knife-slashed body of 6-year-old Dolores Stafford.

Her nude body was found Tuesday in the attic of Robert K. Ervin's Las Vegas home. She had been stabbed in the stomach and her throat had been cut.

Ervin, 20, a fry cook, disappeared while police were searching for the girl.

Investigators said she apparently died Monday night.

Spud Office Starts Probe

TULELAKE—Jack Slezak, certified seed potato inspector, said today that his office has started the first field inspection.

All fields entered for certification will be required to be at least 300 feet from any other growing potato plants except when, in the judgment of the department of agriculture, there is sufficient natural barrier or other protective measure to prevent the spread of diseases.

Two seed sources, or varieties, in one field entered for certification should be separated by one or more blank rows as a permanent marker. Stakes sufficiently high to be clearly visible at both ends of the field may be substituted in place of blank rows.

In the event one of such lots is rejected, the entire field may be rejected unless the adjacent 300 feet of the questionable lot is thoroughly rogued. In order to avoid this, sufficient separation of the sources or varieties should be arranged. Lot identification tags are available at the inspection office.

Fields should be rogued as often as necessary, and if any diseased, defective or off-type plants are present at the time of any of the field inspections, the field must be rogued under the supervision of the inspector, immediately after such inspection.

Failure to rogue as defined shall disqualify for certification regardless of the percentage of diseased plants present.

Inspection of the potato plants at least two times during the growing season is necessary to determine true to type and variety, and freedom from disease. The first field inspection should be made as soon as the plants are large enough to clearly show virus disease symptoms, and before the diseases have had too great an opportunity to spread to healthy plants. Growers should notify Slezak's office when they think their fields are ready.

Around 2,800 acres in the Tulelake area have been entered for certification this year. This includes all varieties of potatoes.
