Ida Sohrakoff Is Bride Of Kenneth R. Schiewe

Ida Mae Sohrakoff became the bride of Kenneth R. Schiewe of Harrisburg on June 13. The Rev. Melvin Griffith of Klamath Revival Center performed the ceremony in the garden at the home of the bride's mother.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Evaline Sohrakoff and the late Michael Sohrakoff of this city. Mr. and Mrs. William Schiewe of Weston are parents of the bridegroom. The bride wore an empire style short dress of beige lace over egg shell satin with white accessories, and carried a red rosebud corsage on a white ribbon.

Mrs. Dan Wenger, matron of honor, wore a pale blue dress with navy blue accessories and a corsage of red rosebuds.

Warren M. Sohrakoff, brother of the bride, was best man. Mrs. Sohrakoff wore a printed

Women Advises Labor Secretary

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Next time your husband accuses the feminine sex of having no business sense, grab a copy of "Who's Who" and show him the biography of Mrs. Arnyess Joy Wickens.

She's the new economic adviser to Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, the highest ranking woman career official in the Civil Service and one of the country's foremost authorities on business and economic matters. She's also an enthusiastic defender of her sex's much-maligned ability to control purse strings.

Her comeback to claims that capitalism works better when run by men is, "Men had better take a look at women's checking accounts. Women own a great deal of this country's wealth and spend the bulk of the money."

She admits that many gals have a lot to learn about business. But she reminds male critics that "Some men don't have a business sense either."

Mrs. Wickens believes husbands are often to blame for feminine laxity in handling family financial matters.

"Women will learn about business affairs of the family if their husbands will teach them," she declared. "It's no help if he says, 'The little woman would never understand,' and doesn't try to explain things."

To back up her confidence in women's financial ability, she points to the large number of gals employed in jobs that used to be handled exclusively by men. Examples are real estate and insurance sales jobs. Also more women are becoming tellers in banks.

"You never saw a woman in this kind of work before the war," Mrs. Wickens notes.

She explains that there are unlimited business opportunities for women, especially in jobs that require mathematical ability, such as those in the statistical field.

For women interested in a business career, she says, "There's practically no occupation that a woman can't go into if she has ability, drive and doesn't carry a chip on her shoulder."

She explains that women often make a fuss about unimportant things like being excluded from business and professional clubs. When this happens, they often claim they are being discriminated against because of their sex.

"This isn't always so," Mrs. Wickens declares.

She says when she first entered government service that her application for membership in an exclusive New York business and economics discussion group was turned down. "Twenty-five years later," she explains, "I was finally invited to join and was escorted into the meeting room by the men."

Today, Mrs. Wickens' astute grasp of economic problems is applauded by her male colleagues all over the world. Her present job calls for her to study global economic developments and advise Secretary Mitchell on how they are likely to affect Labor Department policies and other government programs. She also assists congressional committees studying economic problems.

Mrs. Wickens, from Bellingham, Washington, has worked for Uncle Sam for 30 years. She's 59. Her first government jobs were with the Federal Reserve Board and the National Emergency Council which was organized to solve depression problems.

She was appointed Deputy Assistant Secretary of Labor for Employment and Manpower in 1956. She has also represented the U.S. at several international labor conferences.

Mrs. Wickens has two sons. One is attending college in California. The other is enrolled in a Pennsylvania preparatory school. Her husband, a former Agricultural Department economist, runs a cattle ranch in Avon, S.D.

She explains that the family gets together several times a year at the South Dakota ranch and at a 10-room farm house which she and her husband own in Maryland. What little free time she has is spent in keeping the large house in order. Her practical nature is revealed by her housekeeping technique.

"I find it's easier to take care of a big house with a lot of rooms," she explains. "When one gets cluttered up you just shut the door."

Bridge Players Join Round Robin

Through the efforts of Mrs. David Richardson the first Round Robin Bridge Tournament in Klamath Falls is off to a good start. One of the objects of round robin bridge is to bring bridge enthusiasts together. Every week contestants meet in each other's homes and play a set of six hands of bridge with each of three other players as designated on a pre-arranged schedule of games.

Contestants in this first tournament include Mrs. Jerry Berco, Hilda Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. David Bunker, Mr. and Mrs. Ron Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Glassow, Dr. and Mrs. Lewis Jones Jr., Mrs. C. A. Killian, Mrs. Ruth Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. Thell Rea, Mr. and Mrs. David Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Ritter, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Rosenbaum and Mr. and Mrs. Orth Sisemore.

Another tournament is planned for this fall after the current one ends in September. Anyone interested in joining the round robin to be started in the fall is encouraged to call Mrs. David Richardson at TU 2-1126 for further information and registration.

Open House To Mark Date

DORRIS — Mrs. Martha Alice Cooper will be guest of honor at a reception on Saturday, July 18, at the Dorris home of her daughter, Mrs. Lloyd (Fern) Lair. The occasion will mark the 80th birthday of Mrs. Cooper and her many friends in Butte Valley and the Klamath Basin are invited to call between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Cooper married Elbert Cooper on July 6, 1886 in Grants Pass. In 1891 they homesteaded what is now known as the "old Otter ranch," two miles North of Dorris at the foot of Dorris Hill. Six children, four of whom are living, were born to the couple.

MR. AND MRS. STAN TECUMSEH

Las Vegas Rites Unite Bly Couple

BLY—Alma Chronister became the bride of Stan Tecumseh in a ceremony performed recently at the First Baptist Church in Las Vegas.

The bride chose for her wedding a street length dress of white lace and a small white hat. She carried a white orchid on a white ribbon.

Evelyn Chronister was matron of honor for her sister-in-law and wore a pink lace over taffeta frock.

Ronald Toltzman, with the Air Force in Las Vegas, was best man. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Chronister chose a light blue linen dress with white accessories and a pink rosebud corsage. Mrs. Tecumseh wore a navy blue linen suit with white accessories and a corsage of white rosebuds.

Also present for the wedding were the bridegroom's father, Lester Tecumseh, and sister and brothers, Rosa, Jeff and Anthony. The newlyweds spent their honeymoon in San Francisco and along the coast. The bridegroom is stationed with the Navy in San Francisco where his wife will join him at a later date.

A reception following the wedding service was held at the home of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chronister in Las Vegas.

Following her return to Bly, the bride was honored with a bridal shower at the home of Mrs. Richard Howard with Doris West, Mrs. Donald Wessel, Kathy Melsness and Betty Jo Patzke as co-hostesses.

Friction Cologne Cools, Refreshes

Friction cologne, which has been in use in Europe for many years, is now coming into favor in this country.

It's a scented cologne like any other but it's intended primarily for lavish use all over the body after bath or shower. It's cooling, refreshing and helps you to feel neat and immaculate even on the most wilting summer day.

Since it is so light and airy, friction cologne usually costs a bit less than other colognes. But that doesn't mean that it isn't delightfully scented. Wood fern cologne, for instance, is one summer fragrance that lingers on. It's a balanced blend of orange and lemon blossoms with fragrant verbena herbs added.

The idea behind friction cologne is that its light scent does allow you to splash it on generously without fear that the fragrance will overpower everyone who comes near you.
