"Country" Music Now On Parade

NEW YORK (UPI) — The popular record charts, dominated for nearly five years by so-called rock 'n' roll tunes, are being invaded by some dyed-in-the-dungarees country music artists.

It began in February with Johnny Cash's "Don't Take Your Guns To Town," which left the recording studio as a country music release but soon found eager buyers in all parts of the nation.

Following Cash's hit came his friend Johnny Horton with "The Battle of New Orleans," currently a top selling disk for Columbia. Another basically "country" release, "The Long Black Veil" by Lefty Frizzell, also has scored in the pop field.

Unlike so many singers today, Cash, Horton and Frizzell are considered "old men" in the record business.
