No-Dust Home Aids Allergy

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — Spring cleaning should include dust-proofing the home if anyone in the family has an allergy.

So say the M. G. Grays, a husband and wife team that, because of Mrs. Gray's allergies started a factory for allergy-free products.

When dust-proofing, start with the bed, the Grays said. Pillows, mattresses, and box springs are the greatest sources of dust. Thoroughly vacuum the bed, from pillows to open springs, and cover with dust-proof bedding covers.

Make sure the bedroom is uncluttered. Remove heavy draperies and rugs which harbor dust. Eliminate quilted robes and slippers. Fuzzy blankets should be covered. Store unused bedding and clothes in special wrappers. Use hard wax on bare floors or cover floors with linoleum or vinyl.

Treat dust mops and rags with a special product that makes dust form heavy lint which does not float into the air.

Electric air purifiers remove dust and pollen from air. Double-density filters should be used on hot air heating systems and air conditioners. Keep windows and frames in good repair to keep out dust and pollen.

Flour from the kitchen, powder from bath or dressing rooms, dust from cellar and attic will irritate allergies unless the house is kept thoroughly cleaned, the Grays said.

ARE YOU AVERAGE?

NEW YORK (UPI)—The average person spends about 12 to 13 hours without hearty food between the dinner meal and breakfast.
