Actor Says Wide Screen Is On Way Out; Wants To Picture People, Not Air

By BOB THOMAS
 AP Movie-TV Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Are movie audiences getting fed up with bigness on the theater screens? Gregory Peck thinks so.

Bigness came in with a bang when the movies suffered the competition of the small home screen. Hollywood thought it had to give the people larger scope. That thinking brought on Cinemascope, Cinerama, VistaVision, Todd-AO and the type of films that could fill such immense screens.

But too often the characters got smaller as the scope grew bigger. The time has come to reverse the trend, says Peck.

"I'm fed up with crowd scenes and spectacles," he remarked. "I believe the time has come to find out what goes on inside of people, not on the outside. The province of pictures today should be to develop real people, put them in interesting situations and see what happens to them."

For just such reasons, he is now portraying F. Scott Fitzgerald in "Beloved Infidel." This is the story of the jazz age author's romance with Columnist Sheila Graham during his Hollywood decline.

Peck never met Fitzgerald. He arrived here as an actor two years after the novelist's death in 1940.

"You hear it both ways," he said. "Some say that Scott created terribly embarrassing scenes at parties. Others say that he was quiet and always sat in a corner. "Some say that he wrote brilliantly. But David Selznick told me he was incapable of writing a dramatic scene that had a beginning and ending and developed into something."

"At any rate, I am not attempting an imitation. I don't look like Scott and I am not a night club imitator. I can only do what I can to capture the essence of the man and hope that his friends will feel that I haven't done him violence."

Non-Tobacco Cigaret Set For Nationwide Try In Newest Cancer Research

By DELOS SMITH
 UPI Science Editor
NEW YORK (UPI)—Scientists are interested in a cold-turkey and mass scale test which they feel will show why many people are so devoted to cigarettes they can't stop smoking them.

These people, in the scientific view, are addicted and the question is whether the addiction is mainly psychological — is nicotine a habit-forming drug when broken down by fire into smoke, or are these people addicted to cigarettes because smoking them is an outlet for inner tensions?

Scientists believe a lot of light will be thrown on this question in the fall when cigaret smokers from coast to coast are offered a cigaret which contains absolutely no nicotine for the convincing reason that it contains no tobacco. That's mass scale and it's large enough to mean something.

The cold turkey angle is this: These tobacco-less cigs are going to be sold on a "scare" basis. Cigaret smokers will be reminded of the widely held scientific opinion that there is a connection between tobacco cigaret smoking and lung cancer. The argument will be made that tobacco cigs are harmful but tobacco-less cigs are harmless.

Will cigaret smokers switch from tobacco to non-tobacco in appreciable numbers? If cigaret smoking is mainly a psychological attachment, they should have no particular difficulty in switching when given such a powerful "motivation" (to use a term of psychologists).

But if the smoke formed by burning nicotine is habit-forming, cigaret smokers—especially veteran smokers—will draw no satisfaction from a tobacco-less fire and they'll find switching more or less impossible. It will all be told by the sales figures for the tobacco-less cigaret in the months following its nationwide introduction.

Its trade name is "Vanguard." Instead of tobacco, it contains a blend of "vegetable fibers." The manufacturer is the Pantob ("Ban Tobacco") Products Corp. The identity of the fibers is a corporate secret.

Australians Developing New Drip-Dry Woolens

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—Australian women soon will be wearing thin drip-dry woolen frocks and blouses.

Drip-dry woolen sports shirts resembling seersucker cottons will be available for men. The drip-dry woolens are the latest development in an intense research campaign aimed at making woolen garments as readily washable as any garment made from synthetic fibers. Wool is Australia's leading export. How much it is used determines to a great extent the nation's prosperity.

After years of research, two Melbourne firms and a government research organization have evolved processes giving wool the

Lost Herder Found Alive

SUPERIOR, Mont. (AP)—Joe Servel, 67, of Yakima, who had been missing for three days in rough Western Montana mountain country, was found alive Tuesday night at the bottom of a steep, rocky canyon.

Sheriff Francis Tamietti said Servel was suffering from shock and exposure and was unable to give a coherent account of his wanderings.

Servel, barefoot, his feet and legs badly scraped from rocks and underbrush, was hospitalized here. He apparently had little food or water for 72 hours. Servel, co-owner of the Faure & Servel Sheep Co., was discovered in the same rugged area where one of the firm's packtrain operators, William Cormack, 35, of Yakima, was found dead Sunday.

John Faure of Yakima, Servel's partner, said Servel disappeared from their remote sheep camp sometime Saturday. The camp, about 15 miles from here, was the same one for which Cormack was found when he disappeared.

Unemployed Up Over Oregon

SALEM (AP)—Unemployment gained about six per cent in Oregon last week compared with the week before, the state Department of Employment reported Monday. It said many lumber companies were closed down because of high fire danger.

A total of 7,859 persons filed claims for unemployment compensation last week, compared with 7,399 the previous week. A year ago, the total was 17,198.

The department said that the fish packing industry should pick up when the season reopens Wednesday, and that canning plants should be operating at capacity within a week.

Boys Urged To Keep It Snooty

MALVERN, England (AP)—Boys at one of England's swankier schools have been advised discreetly: "Dating town girls just isn't done."

Young gentlemen at Malvern College instead should choose their girl friends from three or four expensive private schools nestling in the surrounding hills.

Wolf whistles are out and local belles are asked to look the other way as the boys in black jackets pass.

"Call it advice," said 49-year-old Headmaster Donald Lindsay, 49. "discreet advice."
 "It is not snobbery, you know," the headmaster added. "It is a question of manners. Boys will be boys—if you let them."
