It Seems Almost As If They Were Killing Queen

By TOM A. CULLEN

LONDON (NEA) — "Are they trying to kill off the Queen?" I wrote six weeks ago at the start of Queen Elizabeth's 15,000 mile tour of Canada.

I was referring to the crowded program that Her Majesty was supposed to carry out at break-neck speed.

The Queen's Canadian itinerary read more like the work of would-be recipients than of loyal Commonwealth ministers anxious of their sovereign's health and happiness, I wrote.

Today, it appears my concern was well founded. Not only is Her Majesty ill, but she is returning to England with Prince Philip earlier than anticipated.

Indisposed with an upset stomach, she was forced to stop two days off of her Yukon tour. Now the Queen and Prince Philip are shortening their tour even further by flying home, instead of returning in the royal yacht Britannia.

Anxiety to see their children is the official reason given for the sudden curtailment of the royal tour. This excuse fools no one here.

One only has to talk to those who have accompanied the Queen, or to look at the photos of her taken during the tour to get some idea of the terrible strain she has been under.

The photos show her face lined with fatigue, the result of 10 hours a day fulfilling official engagements.

Those little puffs underneath the eyes are the result of sleepless nights in trains, planes and aboard the royal yacht.

Some idea of the Queen's ordeal may be gained from the toll of sickness among members of the official party. Several of her entourage, worn out by thousands of miles of travel and irregular meals, now have minor illnesses. The same is true of the press corps that has accompanied the Queen.

After her recent stomach upset, the Queen appeared in public more heavily made-up than usual, an obvious effort to hide the pallor of her complexion.

The state of Elizabeth's health is causing lively concern among her subjects here. The Daily Express describes her as carrying out "one of the toughest jobs faced by any woman today," while the Manchester Guardian calls for re-thinking in the planning of royal tours.

The Daily Telegraph publishes letters protesting against the Queen's "impossibly overloaded" schedule. One reader warns, "We shall earn the contempt of such warm-hearted and loyal peoples as the Dutch and the Danes, who know how to allow human rights to their sovereigns."

At home there apparently will be no let-up in the official engagements for the Queen and Prince Philip. They are leaving for a tour of the Orkney and Shetland Islands early in August. After a short rest comes a State visit to the newest Commonwealth member, Ghana.

One suggestion to lighten the Queen's burden is that she make her visits to Commonwealth countries shorter, and combine duty with pleasure.

For example, on one visit to Canada she might take a real vacation in the Rockies and visit a few towns in Alberta and British Columbia. On her next visit she could confine herself to Quebec and Montreal without setting a foot in western Canada.

The buried treasure of Tumwater

Before the turn of the century, buried treasure was discovered at the little town of Tumwater in Washington State. The treasure was water! A most unusual water. A water so fresh and pure that it was naturally perfect for brewing just as it flowed from the earth. It was here that the Olympia Brewing Company was founded. And today, over sixty years later, the water continues to flow in unlimited quantity from deep artesian wells with the precise character for perfect brewing. Rarely, in all the world, has such a water been discovered. It is this extraordinary brewing water that blends in and brings out the more delicate flavors of choice hops and grains... creating a refreshingly different beer of unchanging excellence and rare good taste.

the one priceless ingredient... "It's the Water"

Visitors are always welcome to "Ode of America's Exceptional Breweries," Olympia Brewing Company, Olympia, Washington, U.S.A., every day between the hours of 8:00 and 4:30. *Only 15¢ a glass.
