Expert Sees No Danger In Soaring Credit Totals - Says Increase Expected

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)— Not too many years ago, if you wanted to administer the most unkindest cut of all, you'd say derisively to your adversary: "How are you buying that suit—a dollar down and a dollar when they catch you?"

Weather On Muggy Side

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A midsummer spell of muggy weather kept a sticky grip on most areas from the Rockies to the Atlantic Coast today. No immediate general relief from the hot and humid weather appeared.

Some relief in the form of thunderstorms came to sections from eastern Colorado into the northern Midwest. The day's forecast for most areas in the sweater belt indicated a repeat performance of Wednesday's oppressive heat and humidity with temperatures in the 80s and 90s. The Weather Bureau's comfort index classified the weather as "acutely miserable."

The warm, moist air from the Gulf covering nearly all sections east of the Rockies during the night made for restless sleep. Lows in the mid-70s were reported as far north as the upper Great Lakes region and southern New England.

Today things are different and it's the unusual person who can sneer at buying on credit. There is a total of more than $35 billion outstanding in installment credit and the overall consumer credit item amounts to nearly $46 billion.

Today the credit ranges far away from the clothing business, a pioneer in the business. It includes meals, vacations, travel in general, and just about everything you can think of. The biggest item in installment buying, of course, is automobiles where the total runs to around $15 billion.

Just about every time those credit figures are released by the government, there is talk here and there they are too high and something ought to be done about it—even to the extent of government controls.

A. W. Zelomek, president and economist of the International Statistical Bureau, holds that consumer credit figures are not too high.

In International's current "Trend of Distribution," Zelomek holds a further gain of about $4 billion in all consumer credit is probable. But, he adds, a supportable level may be close to $2 billion above the present figures.

Those who are concerned about the debt should consider the following, he says:

"1. The middle income families who are the largest users of consumer credit now receive the largest portion of total income after taxes.

"2. Consumer credit is used by a larger proportion of families than before the war.

"3. Social prejudice against credit buying has disappeared.

"4. Despite the increased purchases of soft goods on time payment, especially in the revolving credit plan, most of the buying on credit is for consumer durable goods. Automobile purchases represent the largest portion of installment volume.

"5. Various built-in stabilizers have lessened the need for a cushion of savings.

"6. The greater number of people moving to urban areas has also been favorable to consumer credit.

"7. The real income of families has increased."

Zelomek looks for a gain of nine per cent above a year ago in retail sales for the last six months of 1959 with all types of retail outlets showing increases, notably durable goods where automobiles are making the best gains.

Furniture and appliance group sales should show the second largest gain in the durable goods category, he adds, with lumber, building, and hardware following. All non-durable goods groups also are expected to show gains. Generally, he finds consumers in a better position to increase their short term debt, and he sees losses from credit sales to continue at a low level.
