

UNDEFINED WAVES of cloudlike lightness rise softly in this gently styled "American Caprice" coiffure, designed for fall and winter by the official hair fashion committee of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

The triangular effect of the full front silhouette, has been softly modulated at the corners. Note the soft lift of waves, swirling gently above the front hairline, and the peek-a-boo treatment at the ears. Professional permanent waving imparts softness to the style and gives it easy manageability.

WIDELY SWEEPING crescents add a disarmingly capricious note to this new "American Caprice" coiffure designed for fall and winter by the official hair fashion committee of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association. The association held its annual convention on July 12 at the Olympic Hotel in Seattle.

The full front triangular silhouette, with the triangle rising from a point at the chin, is one of the new fashion notes of the season. A swirling circle of undefined waves at the forehead lends additional animation and excitement. Soft, undefined waves are continued at the nape and full crown areas, all controlled and managed easily with permanent waving.

BACK TO SCHOOL hair news from Charles of the Ritz draws inspiration from Raggedy Ann. Softly framing the face, the hair is deeply waved and layer cut to give a rounder full look that's so feminine and charming for daytime on the campus. By day this teenage model wears a woolen bow on the side of her hair to match her woolknit sweater by Sportwhirl.

Charles of the Ritz

There's a trunk full of cosmetic goodies from Charles of the Ritz for the teenage skin that are bound to make a big splash on the college campus this season for both boys and girls. It's Ritz-Aid Kit for problem skin and serves as a constant reminder to care for the complexion round-the-clock. Once you've mastered these few simple tricks... like an elephant... you'll never forget. Good grooming and beauty habits learned in youth last you all through life.

Inside the pink and gray set is a tube of Disaster Cream for blemish emergencies, a tube of Velvet Foam for instant acne washing, and a bottle of Medicated Lotion for daytime cover up.

Morning: Wake up with a brisk cool face wash of Velvet Foam. The soft, creamy suds pamper your complexion gently and thoroughly without any irritating drying after effects, and in a splash your skin is sparkling clean. Now, over the blemished area, (or the entire face as a foundation, if you're a girl), don a thin veil of Medicated Lotion that's skin-tone tinted to give smooth coverage throughout the day while it helps heal blemishes and blot up the excess oily shine.

Noon: If the face becomes shiny with oil and soil by mid-day, refresh it in an instant with a Velvet Foam skin wash.

Nighttime: Since a soiled skin is the breeding ground for bacteria, and a cause of serious acne condition, never go to sleep without first removing daytime soil. With warm water, whip up a creamy lather of Velvet Foam's amber jelly onto a wash cloth and carefully massage it over the face in a circular motion, paying special attention to the oily areas of the forehead, around hairline, nose and chin. As it cleanses it also maintains the normal pH of the skin. Finish off with a warm rinse and final splash of cold water. Just before turning out the light, smooth on Disaster Cream skin!

over the affected areas of the face and back, too, wherever blemishes appear. You'll like the way it blends in with the skintone so that there's no "spotty look" en route to bed. And as you dream, the cream stands guard drying the blemish while at the same time helping to keep the acne condition under control. Come morning, the skin is soothed and smoothed and bright as a sunny day... what better storm insurance for teenage troubled skin!

SALAD PARTNERS

Cut thin slices of refrigerator rye bread, spread with softened butter and sprinkle with parmesan cheese. Toast until crisp and serve with salad or soup. Or, cream butter with a dash of mustard, a squeeze of lemon and a little chopped parsley, then spread it lavishly on small sandwich slices.

The Mature Parent

Childhood Outrages Can Haunt Our Adult Lives

When Mr. J. was five years old he got a sled for Christmas. Time passed, and he outgrew it. It was stored behind some trunks in the cellar.

One snowy winter afternoon when he was 11 years old he came home from school to find his little brother belly-whopping down the front walk on his old sled. Shock and outrage possessed him. But when he sputtered them out to his mother, she was bored and impatient.

She said, "What are you making such a fuss for? You've got your new sled. You never use the old one. It's been rusting in the cellar for years. Of course I gave it to Billy. Now get out of my kitchen. I never heard of such nonsense." Yesterday evening Mr. J.'s 16-year-old son took his car without asking permission.

Hearing it start away from the curb, Mr. J. said to himself,

"What's that?" Then, realizing what it was, shock and outrage possessed him. When his son returned with supplies he needed to complete his homework, Mr. J. made a scene from which neither have recovered.

Unknowningly, all this morning at his office he has been feeling the same sense of injury at the younger generation's mistreatment of his property rights that he felt for the older generation's mistreatment of them 35 years ago.

The young often take of our belongings without asking permission. If we feel annoyed at their appropriation of our car, our only pair of white gloves, the magazine we've laid down without finishing, the chances are we had a hard time trying to get our parents to respect our property rights.

The intensity of our sense of injustice is always the giveaway.
