Matter of FACT

Beneath the tall modern buildings and highways of Mexico built by 20th century civilization lie the ruins of an ancient culture showing a high degree of development. In southern Mexico, the Mayas built palaces and pyramids now being unearthed from the thick jungle growths. They prove that Mexico was the home of the first civilization in North America, a civilization older, perhaps, than the Christian era.

matter of FACT

The emperor Nero was suspected of having started the great fire of 64 A.D. in Rome, which destroyed all but four of the 14 districts, because he had long been seeking an excuse to rebuild the city. He rebuilt it splendidly; he widened the streets and used stone instead of wood for houses. As if to avert suspicion, he permitted the Christians to be blamed for the fire. He slaughtered them wholesale, using their bodies as torches to illuminate his gardens.
