French, Rebs In Accord, Says Leader

RABAT, Morocco (AP)—Algerian rebel leader Ferhat Abbas said today France and the rebels now agree the Algerian people shall determine their future rulers but still must settle "the conditions through which our people will be called upon to choose in complete freedom."
Abbas, premier of the rebels' provisional government, said the French so far are trying to set all the rules for negotiations to end the five-year-old rebellion.
"One cannot claim to be partisan to democracy while keeping a monopoly on making the rules," he declared in an interview of sorts with The Associated Press.
The interview consisted of replies to four questions which the rebel leadership itself prepared. The Algerians rejected questions submitted by The Associated Press.
The biggest bar to the start of negotiations, said Abbas, is "the fact that certain French governing circles persist in being against any meeting or any form of negotiation."
French President Charles de Gaulle in a speech Sept. 16 offered the Algerian people a self-determination referendum to be held after peace is restored.
Abbas said the French recognition of Algeria's right to self-determination also admits the right to the United Nations to concern itself with Algerian problems.
The French have rejected any U.N. intervention in Algeria, contending it is French territory and a French internal problem.
Abbas also cited De Gaulle's definition of peace in Algeria, which he said could be considered restored if less than 200 persons a year died from terrorist attacks or other war acts. "He gave the impression that the French government is not disposed to open talks, not even for a cease-fire," said Abbas.
The rebels have refused to discuss a cease-fire unless Algeria's political future is also discussed.

Industry Still Hit Hard By Steel Strike Effects

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Industry across the nation continues to be hard pressed by the nationwide steel strike. And the anticipated court injunction under the Taft-Hartley Act to end the 99-day-old strike isn't expected to help much.
Operators of the Great Lakes ore fleet are expected to have their ships moving again within a few days if the steelworkers are ordered back to work. A spokesman for the Pittsburgh Division of U.S. Steel Corp., operator of the largest fleet on the lakes, said his firm hoped to have all 57 of the company's barges running within seven days if the injunction is put into effect.
The strike has already idled more than 249,000 employees in the auto, appliance, construction, farm equipment, railroad and other industries. And more lay-offs are expected each week. Taft-Hartley law or no Taft-Hartley law.
Hardest hit is the auto industry. Sources have indicated that more than 61,000 employees of the General Motor organization alone are furloughed. Almost all GM car production is due to halt by Nov. 1 because of a lack of steel. Most observers in the auto industry believe that even if the steelworkers go back to work deliveries of the many varied types of steel needed to build cars would lag.
Chrysler and Ford are better off. Both companies said they can assemble cars well into November and probably another month. American Motors and Studebaker-Packard apparently are even better off than that.
The strike is also taking a deep bite out of the national defense. The government—feeling the pinch—has ordered the steel industry to give top priority to items destined for use in missiles, launching sites and nuclear submarines as soon as the strike ends.
The construction industry isn't faring much better. The American Institute of Steel Construction was quoted as saying the steel strike is starting to hurt badly now. Construction activity fell 4 per cent during the month of September. It is expected to take an even greater tumble during the month of October.
Other industries hard hit by the strike are appliances and farm equipment.
