AND FROM JAPAN . . .—Manhattan skyscrapers form a backdrop as a new entry in the already packed small car field is unloaded from a freighter. It's the Japanese Suzuki, a four-seater weighing 1,100 pounds. The manufacturer claims its 18-horsepower engine will drive it to a top speed of 50 m.p.h. Price will be about $1,300.

Happy Whale Submits To Electrocardiogram

By WILLIAM F. TYREE

United Press International
LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Scientists who want to record the heartbeat of the whale have found it necessary to make him a most happy fella before he'll cooperate.

How it's done was described by Dr. Frank G. Nolan, a Los Angeles physician and founder of the Marine Heart Research Foundation, whose group harpooned its first whale off the California coast this past winter.

The whale had its heart beat recorded, which is a boon to research involving the human heart since the two are so basically alike.

Dr. Nolan, who has compared the results of his work with President Eisenhower's heart specialist, Dr. Paul Dudley White of Boston, has been sailing Pacific coastal waters from Mexico to British Columbia for some time in his attempt to subdue—not kill—a whale.

To do this, especially when the whale is heading home for the Arctic and is in an unsociable mood, Dr. Nolan developed a technique of using a "cold" harpoon. It is not loaded with high explosives but with Serpasil, the tranquilizing drug; Xylodaine, and anesthetic, and Tetracycline, an antibiotic.

This made for a happy whale who was ready to hold still for injections of electrodes into each shoulder and one into the tail section.

Then, because the whale wasn't hurt, the first whale electrocardiograms in history were taken. At this point, the whale was alive, a 42-foot mammal weighing 25 tons, and in a mood for study as it rolled through the water for nearly two hours.

When the electrocardiogram was completed, the whale finally was killed so that Dr. Raymond Truex, Philadelphia anatomist, could go to work on the huge heart section.

The object was a complete study of the whale's cardiovascular system, which Nolan and Truex agreed could provide many clues on congenital heart ailments, blood coagulation problems and many other ailments involving the basic cardiac system.

The whale's heart, they found, weighed about 350 pounds. It took the two doctors about three days to remove the sections they wanted from it for their research.

How Police Learn Jobs

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—A gunman standing in front of several children fires at a policeman. What does the policeman do?

If he works in Oakland, he doesn't fire back since he might hit the children.

This is typical of the situations presented to rookies attending a police academy course here.

They stand seven feet from a moving picture screen armed with a pistol loaded with wax bullets while colored slides depicting various shooting situations are flashed on the screen. It's up to the recruit to decide instantly whether to fire, run for cover or take other action.

Another aspect of the program is night shooting. Lt. Joseph Lawrence points out that "an officer is apt to do much more shooting at night," so rookies now practice firing at targets 7, 15 and 25 yards away in darkness. To pick out the target at 25 yards, however, they can use a flashlight.

FILM STEVENSON CLASSIC

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Robert Louis Stevenson's "Kidnapped" will be filmed by Walt Disney in Scotland and England and will feature 31-year-old Findlay Currie, a well known Scottish character actor.

It will be directed by Robert Stevenson, an English-born distant relative of the author.
