Steel Doors Of Treasury House Counterfeit Millions

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Locked behind stout steel doors in a small room at the U.S. Treasury is five million dollars in paper money—all worthless.

This is the "funny money room" of the counterfeit section of the Secret Service.

It probably is the only place in the country where you can say something is as phony as a $3 bill and be literally correct.

In a locked file in this room are samples of every counterfeit currency ever uncovered by Secret Service, which safeguards the integrity of the nation's money.

The samples include a number of $3 bills — counterfeits of currency issued by state banks before the Civil War.

In vaults lining one wall are millions of dollars of bogus bills seized by the Secret Service in recent years.

The service keeps counterfeits locked in these vaults for five years if there is any chance they'll be needed as evidence in court.

If the service knows it never will need the bills as evidence, it keeps them for two years.

Once a year there is a big cleanup.

All counterfeit bills no longer needed are bundled up and turned over to the Treasury's official destruction committee. This group takes them to the naval gun factory where they are burned.

The counterfeit section vaults also hold bogus or altered coins. Few people bother to counterfeit small change but many try to convert pennies into dimes. The object is to make the pennies usable in vending machines or pay telephones.

Whenever a coin is altered, it ceases to be money. It is then worth only the value of the metal it contains.

Whenever the Secret Service gets a counterfeit bill, it checks it against a master file to see whether other copies have turned up.

The file is used, too, to help people who find caches of old money. This money often is so old and quaint that the finder must establish that it's genuine.

Last week agents checked out some bills that had been hidden for more than half a century. They were fake. Their mates, seized decades ago, were in the file.

MOST HAPPY FELLAH

ALGIERS (UPI) — Touat Mohamed Said, 109, walked 93 miles from his tent village of Soumman to Algiers to claim his old age pension, officials said Sunday.

"I wish to enjoy the remainder of my life peacefully, and I need money for that," he was quoted as saying.

Vermont was an independent republic for 14 years before becoming the 14th state in the Union in 1791.

Coroner Orders Autopsy In Death Of Socialite

GENOA CITY, Wis. (AP)—An autopsy has been ordered to determine the cause of death of Virginia Kraft Dore, 39, a socially prominent bride of six weeks.

Mrs. Dore's husband, Francis, 38, found her body in their living quarters above the garage of the plush Honey Bear Farm resort, a well known dining place which she managed. Two automobiles were parked in the garage and the motor of one was running. The other vehicle, its ignition switch on, was out of gas.
