Railroad Men Contemplate Labor War

CHICAGO (UPI) — Front line fighters from management and union forces skirmished today in clashes that may herald one of the nation's most bitter railroad labor wars.

Although contracts covering many rail union members expire Sunday, the Railway Labor Act will forestall an immediate strike.

But around conference tables and in hotel rooms, each side will attempt to hammer home to the other the idea of no concessions.

Under terms of the labor act, mediation began this week in separate disputes involving the Locomotive Engineers, Railway Conductors and Brakemen, and the Switchmen. These unions have asked 12 per cent pay increases and other improvements.

The fight went into mediation when national negotiations got nowhere.

Robert O. Boyd, National Railway Mediation Board chairman, and three mediators met Monday with officers of the 30,000-member Engineers' Union, and then with representatives of the Eastern, Western and Southeastern Carriers Conference committees.

Today the mediators meet with committees from the railroads and from the 30,000-member Conductors and Brakemen Unions. Wednesday they will meet with the Switchmen.

Other unions waited back of the front. A three-year "moratorium" with the railroads signed by 16 non-operating unions in 1956 expires Sunday. These unions have indicated they will ask for 25-cent-an-hour increases plus other benefits.

There are indications both the unions and the carriers consider the coming talks a test for survival. The railroads, smarting under unrelenting competition, have charged that union practices cost them millions of dollars annually in money spent for work not received.

They charge that many workers engage in "featherbedding," collecting big pay for little work, and thus putting the carriers into an untenable position with the competition.

The Railway Labor Executives' Association has countered that railroad employment dropped from a peak of two million in 1920 to 797,000 last month, lowest in 64 years, and that these workers are handling up to 60 per cent more traffic than during the top employment period of 39 years ago.

The rail unions are staging a giant labor rally here Nov. 5, AFL-CIO President George Meany delivering the main address. The theme of the rally is "labor answers the railroads," referring apparently to the question of featherbedding.

Odds Stacked Against Drunks
BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)—"Take a number from one to ten." Magistrate Joseph Kolodny told William W. Evans.
"Ten," said Evans.
Kolodny sentenced Evans to ten days in jail on a drunkenness charge. Then he turned to co-defendant Raymond F. Petty and asked him to select a number.
"One," said Petty.

But the odds had changed. Petty also was given ten days by Kolodny who said he didn't want to break up a friendship.
