

Red Nuclear Advances Causes Western Chiefs To Ponder A-Moratorium

LONDON (UPI) — The Western powers are beginning to have second thoughts on the present moratorium on nuclear test explosions because of reported startling advances in Russian nuclear weapons. Western military experts said today.

The experts told United Press International the Western delegates at the Geneva nuclear talks are caught between the devil of public opinion which opposes further nuclear explosions and the deep blue sea of advanced Soviet nuclear techniques.

For nearly a year the world has watched the negotiations in Geneva, hoping that the specter of a deadly nuclear arms race can be erased. The talks resumed in Geneva this week after a two-month recess.

At the moment the "nuclear club" of Russia, the United States and Britain have a verbal understanding that no nuclear tests will be made before next year.

The military experts in London said the Western leaders recognize the strong public demand for a ban on tests. But, they said, evidence so far of the danger to health by radioactive fallout is not conclusive.

Western statesmen and military leaders have the responsibility for deciding whether the military risk to the West of a prolonged ban on tests outweighs the improved danger to health, they said.

The experts recalled evidence given by the U.S. Atomic Energy

Commission early this year to a closed session of a Senate subcommittee. AEC scientists said that fallout, trapped and analyzed after a particularly dirty Russian nuclear test last year, indicated that Russia had developed a "super atom bomb."

Analysis of this fallout led the U.S. scientists to the conclusion the Russians had enormously greater supplies of uranium than the West suspected. It also indicated they had solved the problem, which still baffled Western scientists, of bringing large quantities of uranium-235 together in the casing of their superbomb without producing an automatic nuclear reaction.

The military experts here said Russia's Sputniks and Luniks have shown she has missiles capable of delivering her super atomic bomb. No country yet has a missile powerful enough to carry a hydrogen bomb, they said.

One of the main problems is in the method of detonating the hydrogen bomb. The start of a fusion reaction requires such vast heat and energy that Western scientists have so far been able to produce it only by using an atomic bomb to detonate the hydrogen bomb.

The Russians also appear to be ahead of the West in finding an alternative to this, according to the London experts.

A Soviet explosives expert, Gen. Georgi Iosifovich Pokrovsky, said recently all Russia's latest hydrogen bombs are detonated by what he called an "electrical explosion" instead of by atomic bombs.

Western military experts said the value of the hydrogen bomb, even in massive retaliation, was seriously limited by its weight and that at present it can be delivered only by manned bombers.

The experts said all Soviet targets are surrounded by deep anti-aircraft defenses equipped with radar and guided missiles. An attack by manned aircraft would involve heavy losses in men and planes and a large percentage of waste in bombs which would not reach their targets.

In view of this, the experts said, it is vital for the West to improve and lighten the hydrogen bomb and this can be done only through test explosions.

Sweeps Winner Can't Believe It

GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP)—"I guess I was a little foggy. You read about things like that happening to other people, but you never think it'll happen to you."

Charles Swjantek, 39, a grocer from nearby Herminie, made the statement to newsmen Wednesday after learning that he had won $58,000 in the Irish Sweepstakes.

Swjantek's winning ticket was on Anthelion, which finished second in the race at Newmarket Raceway in Dublin last Thursday.

Indians of the north Pacific coast prize the candlefish as food and for its oil.
