Trapped Men Get Out Alive

DANBY, Vt. (AP)—Eight men were trapped two and a half hours in a marble quarry shaft Friday by a fire that destroyed a machinery building at the shaft entrance. They were rescued unharmed.

The men, trapped in a 1,500-foot shaft that tunnels into the hillside nearly horizontally, dropping only 25 or 30 feet through its length, moved deep into the shaft as smoke swirled in. They said they were able to stay in clear air under the smoke.

The fire burned out the wires of the quarry telephone system, cutting off communication with the trapped men, and also spread to shoring timbers at the tunnel mouth, causing rock and rubble partially to block the entrance.
