CHAMBER COMMENTS

by GEORGE T. CALLISON

Assistant Mgr. KLAMATH COUNTY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

One generally accepted definition of the work done by a chamber of commerce — a definition mentioned before in this column — is: "To make the community a better place to live and to make a living."

It is interesting to note that the phrase "better place to live" occurs ahead of "make a living." Improving the economic level of a community is a basic, essential function of any chamber. Chamber members are equally ready, willing and able to work to improve schools, create better recreational and entertainment programs, encourage new or expanded hospitals, and support other activities whose major motivation is a better-rounded, more attractive, healthier and more pleasant place to live.

Increased concern in what might be called the livability factors of a community developed after World War II at least partly because of the increased mobility of the average American. The young man entering the business, professional or industrial world today can get a job almost anywhere he wants to go. As a result, he chooses the location which offers the best cultural and recreational facilities—the best libraries, schools, hospitals, churches, parks, playgrounds and so on.

When the demand for such facilities grew in cities across the nation, the chambers of commerce were, in many instances, the logical groups to investigate, research, initiate and direct activities to provide them. As in the case of the strictly economic expansion problems, several hundred men and women, by pooling their ideas, energies and resources, can accomplish many things the individual simply can not do.

There are often occasions when the chamber calls on the entire community to get the job done because the problem may be of such magnitude that the best thinking and the unified efforts of the whole community are required to solve it. This is happening right now in Klamath County in the effort to provide the area with a modern community hospital to meet not only today's needs but the needs that can be reasonably anticipated 10 years into the future.

A community hospital committee within the chamber spent nearly two years in study and research. Hundreds of letters were written, personal interviews were held and inspection trips were made to several western cities. At every turn, the committee received the same advice: do not turn a shovel of dirt on a new hospital before an independent survey of the problem has been conducted. The most highly recommended organization to conduct such a survey—from some cities that had employed its services, and from others which hadn't but wished they had—was the Stanford Research Institute.

Bob Mest, chamber president, recently appointed five well known, respected, public-spirited citizens to a board of governors, charged with the responsibility of raising the $8,000 needed for a four-month survey proposed by Stanford Research Institute. They, in turn, have appealed to 140 local clubs and organizations for their support. From the initial response, the board reasonably anticipates being in a position to enter contract negotiations with Stanford Research Institute by December 1.

That's just the first step. A sparkling new hospital won't spring into being overnight. There is a lot of time, money and energy still to be spent... a lot of sacrifices yet to be made. But because a community-wide problem is being attacked by the entire community, a prompt and proper solution can not help but come.

New OTI Well Down 285 Feet

Exploratory well drilling on the new 150-acre Oregon Tech campus site at the northeast edge of Klamath Falls has reached a depth of 285 feet, according to W. D. Purvine, OTI director.

E. E. Storey, local well driller, holds the contract awarded by the State Board of Higher Education through the Department of Finance.

The drilling is for both hot and cold water and it was anticipated that depth might have to be as much as 1,000 to 1,100 feet.

At the end of the week, the driller was making about 10 feet a day. Earlier, while drilling through the basalt layer, only six inches an hour could be penetrated.

When Storey pulled his drill up during the chilly morning hours on Friday, the metal steamed and he estimated he was drilling at about a 70-degree level.

Theft Charge Dismissed

A petty larceny complaint against Leon Pearson, 33, and Melvin Chioquin, 29, was dismissed in district court Friday—the day the defendants were arrested.

The complaint was dismissed upon the affidavit of Mrs. Priscilla Bettles, who said Pearson and Chioquin had stolen gasoline from the Bettles' Upper Klamath Lake ranch last Monday evening.

In another district court case, Dan Scott, 25, Warm Springs, pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of petty larceny involving theft of possessions from a tourist's cabin at Melita's Motel near Chioquin early in August.

The charge originally was burglary in a dwelling. Scott was sentenced to 60 days in jail by District Judge D. E. Van Vactor.

Supervisors Pass Seed Permit Law

YREKA—A special session was called Thursday by the Siskiyou County Board of Supervisors, to pass an ordinance requiring a permit from the agricultural commissioner before garbled seed or seed stock can be planted.

The ordinance was passed in an effort to prevent the infestation and spread of nematode and white rot fungus in garlic in Siskiyou County.

Only after extensive inspection to determine that the garlic is free of these diseases will the commissioner issue the permit.

Grand Jury To Receive Dope Possession Case

A 22-year-old airman was bound over to the grand jury on a narcotics charge Friday after an involved hearing in district court.

County Booth At Exposition Attracts 6,000

LAKEVIEW — A total of 6,000 were checked through the Lake County booth during the eight days of the Pacific International Livestock Exposition at Portland, according to E. H. McKinney, manager of the Lake County Chamber of Commerce.

The booth was left with the displays at the September 17 close of the Centennial Exposition. The P.I. drew more visitors to the booth than did the exposition.

The booth was open an average of 14 hours a day. McKinney was assisted in manning by Mrs. Marilyn Dolan, chamber secretary, and her mother, Mrs. George Schadler.

The displays in the booth were removed, packed and brought home by McKinney himself at the close of the show. Requirements in the contract with the centennial committee were that the space would be left "broom clean."

An item of interest which is not widely known locally is the fact that there is an annual picnic in Portland for ex-Lake County residents. Between 35 and 40 persons attend each year and list themselves as the ex-homesteaders.

OBITUARY NEILSEN

MOUNT SHASTA—Funeral services were held in Mount Shasta Community Methodist Church Saturday, October 31, at 2 p.m. for Mrs. Ruth Elinore Neilson, 39, who died Wednesday, October 29, in San Francisco after a brief illness. Following final rites, interment was in Mount Shasta Memorial Park.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Grand jury foreman Cecil Galbraith's detailed observations on intoxication—he got drunk in the interest of law enforcement — apparently will not go down in recorded history.

The Harris County grand jury's end-of-term report Friday, omitted any reference to its foreman's scientific binge.

It was "purposefully" omitted, Galbraith, a Baptist deacon, told newsmen. He declined to say why. After an hour and a half of drinking Oct. 2 his blood showed .255 of one per cent alcohol. State law considers .15 of one per cent proof of intoxication.

The grand jury later issued an interim report halting the experiment. Galbraith concluded that perhaps the state's percentage figure was too high.

Joseph Bowen Silvey, 73, died here October 31, 1959. Native of Chico, California, resident of Klamath Falls for the past 30 years. Survivors include the widow, Clara, and a stepdaughter, Ruby Allan, of this city; sister, Mary Neve, Oakland, and numerous nieces and nephews. Red Cross Seeks Aid For Typhoon Victims

A lightning-fast blanket collection campaign for victims of September's tragic typhoons in Japan and Korea will be launched here November 2 by the Klamath Basin Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The chapter is seeking new and used blankets in good condition which will be shipped to the Far East for the hundreds of thousands of men, women and children left destitute by the storms, which were the worst in the histories of both nations. In announcing the campaign today, John Zumwalt, chapter chairman, said that Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, National Red Cross president, had advised him of the extreme urgency of the need for blankets.

General Gruenther said that with the approach of cold weather, a staggering number of Japanese and Koreans face the prospect of illness and death because they lack the means to keep warm. Zumwalt stated, "We sincerely hope the people of this area will help alleviate this desperate situation by contributing blankets to the Red Cross chapter."

Zumwalt said no limit has been set on the number of blankets required. "We need all we can get," he declared. He added that similar campaigns are being carried on by many Red Cross chapters throughout the West Coast.

The local chapter plans to arrange for cleaning all used blankets contributed. No substitutes, such as quilts, comforters, or used clothing, can be accepted. Blankets of any fabric are needed whether they are cotton, wool, or linen. Blankets should be whole but any color or size will be accepted.

The Department of Defense has offered free transportation of the blankets to the Far East. Distribution will be handled by the Red Cross societies of Japan and Korea. The two September typhoons — Sarah and Vera — left a million homeless in the two countries. The death toll stands at over 5,000, while damage figures run in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Zumwalt quoted from a message sent to the Red Cross by the mayor of Nagoya, Japan, one of the hardest hit cities. It said, "Thousands who lived through the great storm are destitute. Thousands more are without homes, shelter, clothing, or bedding. We are caring for many in temporary shelters, but others in great numbers are still without refuge. They are living and sleeping in the open, under bridges, in the stands at the race track, and in other places."

The Japanese and Korean Red Cross societies still are working around the clock in aiding the disaster victims. The American Red Cross' decision to launch the blanket campaign came after receiving reports from the two sister societies.

The local chapter chairman emphasized that time is of the essence in getting the blankets to Japan and Korea, as the cold weather is rapidly setting in. He urged that all donations of blankets to the Red Cross chapter be made as quickly as possible.

The following on the drive was released by R. H. Gallagher, president of the Klamath County United Fund.

"We have been advised that the Klamath Basin Chapter of the American Red Cross has been asked to participate in a nationwide emergency appeal for blankets. This appeal is being made for the hundreds of thousands of people in Japan and Korea that were left with nothing after the September typhoons. By the number of people killed and left homeless, this will become one of the most devastating disasters in our lifetime.

In addition to the relief assistance being given by the International Red Cross, the people of

Cancer Study Survey Team Needs Assist

Mrs. Harold Cloake, president of the Klamath County Chapter of the American Cancer Society, has been asked to name a county chairman to be responsible for obtaining specialized appeal and in its wisdom the Red Cross is asking only for blankets that can be transported and distributed so as to relieve suffering as soon as possible.

"The Red Cross, which is a fundraising partner with the United Fund, retains by agreement the right to make any such necessary disaster appeal. We urge the support of the people of Klamath County in supplying blankets for this most worthy appeal. A copy of this statement will be mailed to the 60 United Fund board members and I will ask them personally to supply blankets they may have available."

Group leaders will recruit enrollees, each of these volunteers to contact 10 families in which there is at least one person over the age of 45 and invite them to check the four-page questionnaire. These questions and answers will be returned in a sealed envelope to the county representative who will forward the confidential material enclosed to the research scientists in New York.

Oregon is one of 22 states participating in this search to shed light on what factors in the environment and habits of people can be pinpointed as contributing to or causing cancer. The state's 17,000 families will be among half a million questioned across the nation.

According to District Attorney Paul Baker, Lewis was arrested the previous Saturday night following a disturbance in a local tavern. He was placed in the main cell block, which already contained other prisoners, by the night jailer.

Among the prisoners was Kelly who was serving 135 days in jail for drunk driving.

Sheriff Sevier says that, according to his best information, Kelly struck Lewis, knocking him to the cement floor. Kelly has admitted picking up the injured man, placing him on a cot and covering him with a blanket. However, he claims that Lewis fell to the floor, injuring himself.

The hourly check by the night jailer failed to reveal anything amiss as Lewis was lying in a natural position. The next morning, the jailer was told by Kelly that Lewis had been injured in a fall, the sheriff's office said.

Lewis was taken to the hospital and did not regain consciousness during the six days he lived. An autopsy performed Friday by Dr. Lloyd Shannon at the Kerr Mortuary showed that Lewis died of a massive concussion. He had a four inch fracture of the skull. Officers maintain he had been knocked to the floor by a sharp blow to the jaw by Kelly.

Kelly has been arrested in Modoc County 35 times, sheriff's records show. He has been charged with three felonies and many lesser offenses. He has served jail terms, also, in Lassen and Shasta counties.
