Speed, Drink Blamed For Most Wrecks

CHICAGO (UPI) — As you hit the highway today — or any day, for that matter — think of this: Studies of the causes of deaths in auto accidents show the two biggest killers, in order, are speeding and drinking. They kill more people on the highway than all other causes combined!

The great majority of fatal auto accidents involve traffic law violations and — tragically — seven out of ten persons killed are innocent victims of someone else's driving mistakes.

Two of the most recent major national studies of the causes of traffic accidents were made by the National Safety Council and the Central Automobile Safety Committee of the Kemper Insurance Company. These separate studies analyzed accidents that occurred on five different holiday weekends. They used different classifications in listing causes of the fatal accidents, but reached the same conclusions.

The mounting death toll on highways and city streets could be cut, both organizations agreed, if uniform and realistic traffic laws, backed by suitable penalties, were applied without discrimination.

"Rigid, continuing and relentless enforcement of fair traffic laws is a major essential to cutting the toll," a Safety Council spokesman said.

"Every motorist and pedestrian must know traffic laws, accept strict and impartial enforcement of realistic laws and insist on severe penalties for all who violate the law," the Kemper committee said.

"I wish the study could prove that traffic law violators killed only themselves," added Hathaway G. Kemper, chairman of the companies in the Kemper group. But he pointed out the reverse is true. He quoted Kemper's analysis of the three-day Memorial Day weekend in 1958, the most recent such study, based on accident reports by police departments and highway patrols in every state except Pennsylvania.

Of the 316 accidents, 265 involved traffic law violations and brought death to 330 persons; 42 resulted from such driver errors as falling asleep at the wheel or losing control of the car, and 19 from unknown causes.

Sixty-eight of the 265 drivers who broke the law killed only themselves, and 67 perished in accidents which claimed a total of 171 innocent victims.

Police reports showed 129 persons on that weekend lost their lives because of speeding and 71 were killed by drinking drivers.

Failure to yield the right of way accounted for 31 deaths, crossing the center line 26, disregarding signs 16, improper passing 13, improper turning 9, reckless driving 6, improper parking 3 and following too close for 2.

An additional 24 pedestrians guilty of such law violations as crossing the street in mid-block were killed.

Drivers who fell asleep at the wheel accounted for 15 of the 42 deaths attributed to "driver error." Eleven occurred when the driver lost control of his car, 19 were due to improper judgment, 5 to inattention, and only 1 to defective equipment, according to the study.
