Rockefeller Gives Views On Economy

NEW YORK (AP)—Gov. Nelson Rockefeller says a series of American labor could benefit the national economy by foregoing further reductions in the work week. He says taxes might be cut by 1970 as much as 15 per cent as a result.

But the New York governor says his statement is only an analysis, not a recommendation.

The Republican governor, widely regarded as an undeclared candidate for next year's presidential nomination, addressed the Economic Club of New York Monday night.

"There is no compelling reason why American growth should be fixed at the historic 3 per cent rate, or even the postwar 4 per cent rate," Rockefeller said.

"Since 1930, our average work week has declined from over 48 hours to under 38 hours, or by 3 hours every decade. The increase in leisure has been an important social gain, but it has also diluted our production record."

In the face of growing union pressure for a 30-hour week, Rockefeller said: "Few would urge that we should keep cutting the work week at this rate for an indefinite period into the future. If we should decide at any point to forego further work week reductions in favor of increased output of goods and services, this in itself could allow us to realize the full benefit of our almost 3 per cent annual increase in output per man hour."

"This normal increase in productivity, plus a reasonably expectable 2 per cent annual increase in the work force, would put a 5 per cent growth rate well within our reach."

The governor predicted, under a 5 per cent growth rate, an average American family income by 1970 of $11,400.

"And on this basis by 1970 we could pay for a 50 per cent expansion of all government services, including defense, at tax rates—federal, state and local—15 per cent under current levels," he said.
