

CAROL D. BAILEY

New Evangelist Comes To Basin

Carol D. Bailey is the new evangelist serving the Church of Christ, 1784 Arthur Street. He came to Klamath Falls about six weeks ago from Senath, Missouri, with his wife and three young children, Caroline, 6, Bruce, 3, and Jim, 6 months. In addition to the usual morning worship service, his duties include a preaching service each Sunday evening; mutual edification services, home Bible studies, supervising young people's classes and visitation.

Conference Scheduled

A missionary conference will begin at the Free Methodist Church November 13 and will continue through Sunday, November 15, with Miss Beryl Ring as missionary speaker. Services will start at 7:30 p.m. except Sunday. The Women's Missionary Society of the church will be in charge of the Friday service; the intermediate age group Saturday night. At all services Sunday, Sunday School at 9:45 a.m., worship services at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., emphasis will be on missions. Miss Ring will show slides at the evening service. The public is invited to all services.

Church Plans Observance

"Men and Missions" Sunday will be observed November 15 during the morning worship hour at 11 a.m. at the Free Methodist Church, 1819 Oregon Avenue. Men of the church will assist in presenting the work of foreign missions sponsored by the denomination on 22 fields. A total of 1,385 Free Methodist congregations in the United States and Canada are expected to cooperate by observing this day. Many of the churches overseas will on the same day give their offerings for world missions. In some countries this will be produce, peanuts, rice, chickens and corn meal. The goal for North American churches is five cents per day per member. All are invited to share the inspiration of this significant day.

New Mexican Indians built an apartment house with some 80 three-room apartments about a thousand years ago.

THINKS OF RETIREMENT

NEW YORK (UPI) — Helen Hayes, first lady of the Broadway stage, indicated Wednesday she may retire from the theater. Turning down a Broadway role in the comedy "A Adventure," she said in a telegram to the author, James P. Davis, "I've thought and prayed over this but I don't want to commit myself to yours or any other play until I've come to yearn again for work—which may be never."

"I've talked of retiring for a long time," her telegram said. "It may just be I've finally made it without knowing it."

LLOYD ALDRICH

New Chief Of Steel Union Rose From Bottom Ranks

United Press International — Leslie B. Worthington was an immigrant boy who first tasted hard work in the grimy coal mines of southern Illinois.

He capped his rags-to-riches rise to the top Tuesday by becoming president and chief administrative officer of United States Steel, the world's biggest steel maker.

Worthington's presidential office in Pittsburgh is a far cry from the paintless family home in tiny Witt, Ill., where he spent his boyhood.

Worthington, now 57, was 5 years old when his coal miner father brought his family from England to the United States.

The boy worked in the town's general store during his grammar school days and joined the union during high school to help his father eke out a meager living from the dirty, dangerous coal mines.

Worthington worked his way to a bachelor's degree from the University of Illinois in 1923, then began his 36-year trip to the presidency by joining a U.S. Steel subsidiary in Chicago as a sales apprentice.

He became assistant manager of sales for the subsidiary in 1933, was appointed manager of the St. Paul district sales office in 1935, spent five years at the Detroit sales office and went to Pittsburgh as sales manager for bar, strip and semi-finished materials for Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp.

Worthington came back to Chicago in 1942 as vice president of U.S. Steel's supply division. He became division president in 1946, a job he held until 1957, when he was appointed president of the firm's Columbia-Geneva Steel Division in San Francisco.

His appointment Tuesday

marked the first time a president had been chosen from the sales corps.

Worthington has been married for 31 years to Dorothy Helen Rice, a University of Chicago graduate he met while a sales apprentice.

One of their sons — Paul Leslie, 23 — is following in his father's footsteps as a U.S. Steel sales trainee in Pittsburgh, while their other son — John Rice, 29 — is a Chicago attorney.
