Cranberry Stew Brought To Boil Again As Berry Shipments Held

WASHINGTON (AP)—The national cranberry stew bubbled again today with a new protest from growers.

Chicago health officials were holding a shipment of Wisconsin cranberries which they said were contaminated with the same kind of weed killer found earlier on some West Coast berries.

C. P. Olsson, president of Ocean Spray Cranberries, Inc., a national cranberry cooperative, asked President Eisenhower to declare as disaster areas the cranberry-growing states of Washington, Oregon, Wisconsin, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

In a telegram sent from Plymouth, Mass., to the vacation White House at Augusta, Ga., Olsson asked Eisenhower to "provide immediate relief to thousands of small farmers for losses caused by the unnecessary, untimely and imprudent action" of Welfare Secretary Arthur S. Flemming.

At a news conference last Monday, Flemming said traces of a weed killer had been found in some of the cranberries grown in the Pacific Northwest. He said the weed killer, Ammatriazole, had caused cancer in rats when it was included in their diet.

The secretary advised against eating the berries until tests could be made to be sure they contained no traces of Ammatriazole.

The cranberry growers immediately protested that Flemming had pulled the rug from under them just before the holidays.

Two shipments of cranberries grown in Oregon were seized last week by health authorities. On Saturday, the Chicago Board of Health seized 20 tons of cranberries grown in Wisconsin and impounded them. The board said its tests showed four of six samples of the shipment were contaminated with the weed killer.

Sales of all cranberries and cranberry products were barred in Chicago. Flemming will meet with cranberry growers here Wednesday.
