Regional Corporation Seen As Solving Water Problem

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Oregon Gov. Mark Hatfield said Tuesday night that "a regional corporation is probably the best solution to the water resource problems of the Columbia Basin."

Hatfield told the National Municipal League "problems of river basins and metropolitan regions are not national problems, unless the states fail to act."

Interstate compacts can be used to solve many regional problems, he said.

"I would urge the federal government," Hatfield said, "to endorse such a policy by providing general legislation for each of the various kinds of regional problems—legislation which would assent to compacts containing such provisions as are essential to the national interest."

The alternative, he said, is for the federal government to become even more powerful.

Hatfield said the states in the Columbia Basin can't "achieve their full potential unless the river is fully harnessed to multiple use."

The regional corporation would deal with all of these uses of water.

He said the states should develop an action program that would achieve more similarity in organization among the states.

"We must break the shackles of tradition that leave state government with organization and procedures that limit their ability to deal effectively with the problems facing state government."

As an example, Hatfield said that Oregon's system of coordinating higher education is "widely envied but rarely emulated."

Other states haven't copied it because of "simple inertia," he said.

Trio Injured In Accident

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—A freight train hit the rear end of a bus-sized post office van Tuesday night. The van burst into flames and three men riding in it were seriously injured.

The three, all from the Portland area, were Thomas Funnell, 43; Archie Lee Cunningham, 31; and Wilbur L. Hoyt, 61. They were in a hospital here.

Funnell was the most seriously hurt. He suffered arm burns. Hoyt was thrown from the van when the collision came. The hospital reported all three in fair condition today.

Police said the Southern Pacific freight was going some 35 m.p.h. when it hit the rear of the van, hurling a door of the vehicle 80 feet into nearby utility wires.

The van was 12 miles south of Eugene on old U.S. 99 at the time of the accident. Both the freight and the van were headed north.

Only a small amount of mail was lost. The rest was pulled out ahead of the flames and brought to Eugene in pickup trucks.

Morse Gives Views On Aid

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore) said Tuesday night this country should put more emphasis on foreign aid economic development programs than on military aid.

Morse told the national convention of the American Jewish Congress women's division new U.S. policies should be developed to meet "the ugly fact of mass poverty" in Asia and Africa.

He told the nearly 1,000 delegates, "Our military defense of the free world can be only a negative, holding operation which cannot be expected to earn us thanks."

It can, at best, he said, "maintain a stalemate in the balance of power so that there will be a shade tree under which fruitful crops can grow if imaginative policies are formulated."
