Sooners To Aim At Space

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI)—A new breed of men — space engineers — will be trained at the University of Oklahoma.

The OU School of Aeronautical Engineering is setting up its space engineering program in the belief that imagination must be backed up by practical know-how if man is ever to blaze the trail to other planets.

Bruce V. Ketcham, chairman of the school, said the demand for space engineers is increasing as most aircraft companies convert to missile work.

"In another two years more than half of the aeronautical engineering students may be in space work," Ketcham said. "We must start a formal program now to supply the industry's future demands."

Ketcham said his school has facilities to test liquid and solid propellant rockets in its jet propulsion laboratory. It also has a supersonic wind tunnel capable of developing velocities two and a half times the speed of sound.

OU has offered a course in rocket propulsion for the past seven years. This fall a course in space propulsion is being given for the first time.
