Paul Belmont Success Story

By GEORGE C. HARLAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Paul N. Belmont is a young man in a hurry. At 35, he already is a successful lawyer and businessman, having engineered the metamorphosis of a nearly bankrupt chemical firm into a profitable and growing oil producer.

Belmont, president of Hydrocarbon Chemicals Inc., has been doing things at top speed ever since he graduated from college at 19 with a B.S. degree in chemistry.

After a hitch in the Navy, he sailed through law school in two years and now is a partner in Van Liper & Belmont, a leading Newark, New Jersey, law firm.

"I'm the impatient type," he says. "When I get the urge to do something I get super-charged and can't seem to slow down until it's done."

His efforts to build up Hydrocarbon are an example. Belmont travels more than 300,000 miles a year checking company installations and looking for new oil and gas leases to be developed.

"The oil industry is one of the most highly competitive businesses in the country today," he noted. "You have to be on your toes at all times or suddenly you find yourself out in left field."

Belmont scoffs at the idea that a small business cannot survive in an industry dominated by giants.

"Our company, and many other small oil producers, have fared very well competing with the big oil companies. As a matter of fact, the big companies are among our best customers for the oil we produce."

Belmont says "There is plenty of opportunity in the business world today for the small company with efficient management and sound finances. Most business failures can be traced to inept management, not unfair competition."

Belmont took over Hydrocarbon Chemicals three years ago. At that time the company was on the brink of bankruptcy. He sold its chemical business and concentrated on building up the petroleum aspects of the operation, with emphasis on the secondary recovery of oil.

Secondary recovery, which is receiving wide interest in the oil industry from both big and small firms, requires the use of processes to get additional oil and gas from wells and fields which no longer can produce naturally.

"This year we plan to drill in Texas, New Mexico, Kansas and West Virginia a total of 117 wells which will add substantially to our reserves," Belmont says.

Hydrocarbon is a young company with young executives—the average age of the Belmont staff is 33.

"We got the ball rolling," he says, "and now the challenge is to keep it going in a competitive world where only the victor gets the spoils."

PRO PERFUME

NEW YORK (UPI)—"There's nothing I like better than to have a sweet-smelling doll ride in my cab. What a relief from the exhaust fumes I breathe all day long." That's what a taxi driver said when asked if perfume makes a woman more attractive to a man.
