

Adlai Hints At Third Try

NEW YORK (AP) — Adlai E. Stevenson, knocked down in two tries for the presidency, hints that he may not be out.

Asked on a television panel program Sunday if he would consent to be secretary of state if a Democrat became president, he said: "I would not preclude the possibility of serving my country in any capacity, and my party likewise."

"Does that mean," he was asked, "that you mean you would not preclude the opportunity of being president?"

"I have not in the past," Stevenson replied. "I indicated I thought twice was enough."

Stevenson was defeated in 1932 and 1936.

To the question "Would you accept a draft if it was offered?" he answered: "I think that's one I will have to face when I come to it, and I don't expect ever to come to it. I don't think it can happen twice. It happened in '32. I don't believe it is likely to happen again."

Space Monkey Comes Home

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Sam, the seven-pound rhesus monkey who travelled 35 miles into space, returned to his home Sunday night for a series of tests. He was born at the School of Aviation Medicine here.

Sam was sent aloft Friday by a Little Joe rocket from Wallops Island, Va., in a missile that attained a speed of 3,600 miles an hour.

He was plucked from the Atlantic in his Project Mercury capsule, a chamber designed to carry man in his first orbit around the earth. A Navy destroyer transported Sam to Norfolk, Va., Saturday, and he was flown here in a C-47.

Sam will be under constant observation as doctors attempt to determine the effects of the flight on the monkey.

The monkey has been placed off limits to newsmen while he undergoes tests at Randolph Air Force Base.

Bridge Traffic To Be Tolled

SALEM (AP) — Tolls will be charged for travel on the Interstate bridges between Portland and Vancouver beginning Jan. 4, the Oregon State Highway Commission said today.

The toll will be 20 cents a car, with a 15-cent commuter rate.

The commission estimates that about one-sixth of the tolls will be paid by through travelers on the Pacific Highway, with the rest to be paid by Portland and Vancouver residents.

Each of the two bridges carries one-way traffic. The tolls will be used to pay for the recently completed second bridge.

Eight thousand year old rock paintings found in the Sahara Desert indicate that the now barren wasteland was once the home of elephants, giraffes and antelope.

Researcher Gets Support In Book Burning Battle

SEATTLE (AP) — A University of Washington researcher fighting what he calls the "systemized stupidity" that ordered a literary classic destroyed won support Sunday from Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.).

"We will determine immediately what authority—if any—a book considered a classic for 19 centuries was branded obscene and ordered destroyed," Jackson said. The book, banned for import by the Bureau of Customs, is the Satyricon of Petronius, the Roman satirist who died in 66 A. D.

The banning was brought to light when Eberhard W. Shorrig received a letter from the bureau asking his consent to the destruction of a copy of Satyricon which he had ordered sent from Munich.

The book is required in a classics course at the university and Shorrig had ordered it for his son, Ernst, 18, who is enrolled in the course.

Shorrig protested the bureau's action, calling it comparable to the book-burning days of Hitler.

"This is an individual case," he said, "but if the individual in this case and in every other individual case does not react, we will be confronted by an accumulation of systemized stupidity."

"And one day the monster of non-thinking will control not only what we read, but what we say, what we do, what we believe, and how we live—or if we live."

Meanwhile, Ernst Shorrig is using a copy of the book checked out of the Seattle Public Library.

The Satyricon also can be found on the shelves of the U. S. Library of Congress in 35 editions, including six English translations.

A customs official said Shorrig could receive the book by filing a notice of appeal and stating he needs the book for research work.

The official said the Bureau of Customs has a list of books that are banned and when a book on the list comes through customs it is automatically held until cleared by appeal.

Council Head Raps TV-Radio

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A leading Protestant church spokesman today accused both the government and the broadcasting industry of negligence in failing to promote "sufficiently high standards" in radio and television.

James Wine, representing the National Council of Churches, made the accusation as leadoff witness in a full-dress public review of radio and television practices by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

Wine told the commission that the FCC had been "much too lenient" in its attitude toward "the shortcomings and omissions of American broadcasting."

He said the FCC had a clear-cut duty under the law to insist that "the right to use the people's air should be granted only to those who could be counted on to make a positive and responsible contribution to community well-being."

The National Council of Churches which Wine represents is composed of 35 major Protestant denominations and claims a membership of 39 million persons.

Thieves Rob Dorris Store

DORRIS — Hungry and thirsty thieves broke into Kerwin's Grocery, Third and California streets, here Saturday night. Police Chief Byard Kelly said.

They gawked on lunch meat, drank beer and left with a generous portion of the store's merchandise and its owner-operator's personal property.

The theft was reported to Kelly Sunday morning. Owner Larry Kerwin said he and a friend entered the store Sunday morning and discovered empty beer cans on a counter.

"I knew right then I'd had visitors," he said.

Siskiyou County sheriff's deputies were called from Yreka. They located a portion of the loot in the trunk of a car long since abandoned a block away from the store behind the Dorris Church of the Nazarine.

They found eight cases of beer, six cartons of cigarettes and several bottles of wine.

Kerwin said also missing are many cases of beer, bottles of wine, cartons of cigarettes, eighteen pairs of cowhide gloves and several cases of shotgun shells, as well as a .32 caliber revolver taken from a fire-proof filing cabinet.

Officers said the culprits bit hungrily into a big roll of lunch meat and replaced the roll in a refrigerator.

The intruders gained entry by smashing a door window on the store's west side and reaching in and turning the latch with a screwdriver.
