FCC Studies Revisions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) today studied six proposals for improving radio and television programs and checking broadcast abuses.

The plans were offered during the opening week of the FCC's sweeping broadcast investigation. More proposals were expected when the hearings resume Monday. The witnesses will include educators, church spokesmen and editors.

Commission sources said four days of hearings this week would wind up the first phase of the investigation in which the public has presented its views. The sources said industry spokesmen would be called in the second phase beginning after Jan. 1.

The hearings grew out of charges of rigged TV quiz shows, payola for plugging certain records and other broadcast deceptions. The commission wants to determine whether it has sufficient authority to crack down on radio-TV abuses or needs more power from Congress.

The first five days of hearings ended Friday. Proposals for assuring better programs and wiping out deceptions included:

- Create a national citizens council to set broadcast standards and ride herd on the industry.
- Revise anti-trust laws to allow an industry agreement to set aside certain hours for cultural and other public service programs.
- Strengthen the National Association of Broadcasters' code of ethics.

Sea Lion Missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sandy the baby sea lion may not slide down the chimney with Santa Claus at the home of Robert F. Kennedy this Christmas.

The little fellow with the big whiskers and appealing eyes was supposed to. But he's missing.

Kennedy, former chief counsel of the Senate Rackets Committee and brother of Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass), had bought the sea lion as a surprise Christmas gift for his seven children. They range in age from three months to eight years.

Chocolate-colored Sandy was flown here from San Francisco Thursday afternoon. They put him in a cage and then lowered the cage into the swimming pool on the grounds of the Kennedy home in suburban McLean, Va.

But Friday, when a handyman came to feed Sandy, the 95-pound, 2½ foot bundle of friendliness was gone. Mrs. Magda Kraxner, the housekeeper, called the police. But they couldn't find Sandy.

"Someone may have taken him or else he was able to get under the four-foot wire fence surrounding the pool," Mrs. Kraxner said.

Neuberger Plans To Back Unander

PORTLAND (AP) — Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore) said Friday he will support Senate confirmation of State Treasurer Sig Unander for a federal post.

Unander is expected to resign soon to become a member of the Federal Maritime Board.

Neuberger said that he has notified Unander, a Republican, that he will support him for this post or for any other comparable post.

"DENNIS THE MENACE"

Two Women To Tell Tale

MILLBURN, N. J. (UPI) — Two women who allegedly told a doctor to "go to hell" when he tried to interrupt their telephone party line conversation to make an emergency call fretted silently in court Friday.

They will get to tell their side of the story Dec. 18.

Dr. Marvin Becker, chief of the Cardiac Clinic at Beth Israel Hospital, Newark, testified against the women before Magistrate Milton Freiman.

Mrs. Mary C. Zelinski and Mrs. Janette Hausler, both of Springfield, were accused by the doctor of refusing to give up the telephone in an emergency situation Nov. 11.

At the time, Becker said he had been called to the home of Mrs. Catherine Hammerle, to treat her 81-year-old mother, Mrs. Sophie Wetzel, who had suffered a heart attack.

The doctor said that the women were on the telephone when he tried to use the line to call an ambulance, and told him to "go to hell," when he explained the emergency.

Mrs. Zelinski and Mrs. Hausler were charged with refusing to give up a telephone in an emergency, a violation under the disorderly persons law. The case was adjourned until next Friday.

Tule Lake Drain Facilities To Be Resumed February 14

Associated Press Special Service WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department Friday announced it intends to resume operation of the drainage facilities at Tule Lake, Calif., Feb. 14.

The move is designed to maintain water levels at the Tule Lake National Wildlife Refuge, an important haven and nesting ground for ducks and geese in the Pacific Flyway.

Department officials said the pumping operations of the Tule Lake Irrigation District have reduced the water level to the point that nesting of migratory waterfowl is drastically affected.

Elmer F. Bennett, acting secretary of Interior, said the district was notified the government intends to resume the pumping operation 65 days from now.

He said this action was taken under terms of a 1956 contract under which the irrigation district has been operating the facilities since Jan. 1, 1957.

Bennett added that under the contract the district may initiate measures to correct the violations which caused issuance of the notice of the government's intention.

Bennett pointed out that the operating regulations issued under the 1956 contract call for the district to maintain specified sump levels for the refuge as formulated by the Fish and Wildlife Service.

"Maurice Strantz, manager of the T.I.D.," Bennett said, "is reported to have stated that the objective levels would not be maintained by the district."

"In any event, the record is clear that T.I.D. has not maintained the Tule Lake sumps as required by our contract."

"It has long been our announced intention to require the operation of the Lower Klamath - Tule Lake facilities in a manner that will fully meet wildlife conservation objectives, while serving their primary purpose of protecting agricultural land."

Bennett simultaneously announced he had instructed department officials to suspend consideration for the time being of three related problems in the Tule Lake area.

One of these is the appraisal of the land values involved in a possible land exchange in the Klamath Project area.

Another is a proposed drainage program for lands in Siskiyou and Modoc counties in California, a program intended to prevent salt and water accumulations in portions of the sump area now under lease for agricultural purposes.

The third is the determination of the allocation of costs for removing water from the Lower Klamath Lake area.

"Until the problem of adequate maintenance of the water levels at Tule Lake is resolved, it may not be possible for us to proceed with these related actions," Bennett said.

The ghost bat is regarded with superstition by the Australian aborigines because its wings and fur are white and it feeds on other bats.

Health Officers Pick Bend Woman

PORTLAND (AP) — Dr. Ruth Hickok of Bend is the new president of the Oregon Health Officers' Assn.

She was elected Friday as the organization closed its annual three day meeting here.

Serving with her will be Dr. John Donnelly, Douglas County, vice president, and Dr. Gordon Edwards, Portland, secretary-treasurer.
