Effort Urged To Get Top Students To Enter College

OREGON STATE COLLEGE — An all-out effort should be made to get the "brighter, upper-echelon" high school graduates who now don't go to college—to college, an Oregon State college leader believes.

One-half of the "smarter" high school graduates never go to college.

Dr. Vernon H. Cheldelin, director of OSC's Science Research Institute, said this "waste of human talent" could be partially stopped by an expansion of the national merit scholarship program and by teacher encouragement. These students could prepare themselves for careers in research, where there will be a glaring personnel shortage, he added.

To adequately educate the student and to adequately prepare his high school teacher is the problem, he said.

Although there are many excellent teachers, a number of them who are teaching courses have not themselves had adequate college course work, especially in science and mathematics," Dr. Cheldelin said.

Dr. Cheldelin insists the public school system has not deserved the "whipping received the past few years from the demagogues who just want to make a noise about them.

"We need to better realize what our standards in education are. What's needed is more subject matter and less methodology." This will benefit both the teachers and the students, he continued.

Administrators and school boards can't do it alone or do it too fast, he cautioned. They will destroy themselves unless they get backing by people who want quality in education as they want quality in athletics and music.

Many teachers and school administrators recognize the problem of inadequate subject matter training, but they are hampered by inadequate funds, inadequate training and a tradition that often seems to value "mediocrity in the classroom."

There will be plenty of jobs open in research for the well-trained students, but for the United States to keep the leadership in technology it must increase its expenditure on basic research, the OSC scientist believes.

Basic and long-range research expenditures need to be doubled from the present annual 500 million dollars spent by industry and government, Dr. Cheldelin said.

Only seven cents of the United States research dollar goes to basic research while Russia spends 14 cents and England spends 50 cents in an effort to regain her pre-war excellence in science.

"Basic research is to our society, what seed corn is to the farmer and what timber stands are to sustained-yield forestry," Dr. Cheldelin said.

Basic research is simply the gathering of fundamental information about nature and the universe. It has brought such discoveries as penicillin and the atomic bomb.

WORLD'S TALLEST

RAYMOND, Maine (UPI)—The 1,619-foot tower of Portland television station WGAN, which is now under construction here, will be the world's tallest man-made structure when completed this fall. The tower requires 100 acres of land because the guy wires must be so long. It will contain an elevator rising to within 40 feet of the top.

CONSTANT READERS

NEW YORK (UPI)—The newspaper audience is not only the largest of all audiences, it is a constant audience, according to the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The number of people who buy and read newspapers remains pretty much the same throughout the year in contrast with the wide variance in usage of television sets between winter and summer, the association noted.
