

PNW Paper Not For Sale

PORTLAND (AP)—William W. Knight, publisher of the Oregon Journal, said Wednesday the Journal is not for sale.

Knight made the statement when told of a Carpenters' Union proposal that labor buy the newspaper.

The proposal in a resolution by Local 226 of the Carpenters Union expressed the fear that the Journal would be bought by the Oregonian in the course of a strike in progress against both.

Stereotypers at both newspapers walked out Nov. 10 and other union employees observed picket lines. The two papers suspended separate publication, but immediately started printing a combined edition in the Oregonian plant.

Journal officials stated previously the Journal will resume separate publication in about two months.
