Enough For All

The Salvation Army has used Christmas kettles for more than sixty years. It is believed that the kettles - - originally soup kettles - - were first used to secure funds to feed survivors of a disastrous shipwreck on the rocky coast near San Francisco in 1894.

When the food ran out, a lassie picked up a kettle and on a busy street corner, set up a sign, "Keep the Kettle Boiling" - - and that night there was soup enough for all.

As the shipwreck occurred just before Christmas, the kettle quickly became a symbol of The Salvation Army Christmas Appeal.
