New Year's Festivities To Cost About The Same

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The old passes away, and the new begins Thursday midnight, and across the land, people will greet the hour in quiet or clamor. There will be parties and prayers, parades and paper hats, carnivals and contemplation. There will be remembering and hoping. There will be crowds and people alone. There will be spending, tipping, and the songs of choirs. Millions of men and women will take part in services in city cathedrals and village chapels, pondering the past and regarding the New Year's promise. Other millions will flock to hotels and night clubs, to reinforce their cheer with numbers, comedians, noise and dancing girls. More revelers will whoop it up on the streets. In many places, special events and customs mark the New Year. Cherryville, N.C., holds its traditional "crying in" to usher in 1960, beginning at 12:01 a.m. From then until the following nightfall, two criers, each accompanied by a squad of musketeers, move throughout the town of 3,500, stopping in front of each house.

where the crier gives a lengthy greeting which starts: "Good morning to you, sir. We wish you a Happy New Year. Good health, long life." Then comes a volley from the ancient muskets. The custom, apparently originated by early German settlers, has been observed for 150 years. Out West, the AdAmAn Club, composed of prominent Colorado residents, stages its annual hike to the snowswept summit of Pike's Peak where fireworks are set off at midnight. At Jackson, Wyo., there is a torchlight ski parade down King Mountain. In Miami, Fla., a pre-Orange Bowl game parade is held New Year's Eve, Dallas, Tex., holds the national rodeo finals.

"It will be a more festive New Year's than the last one," was the consensus of San Francisco hotels and night spot operators, who reported heavy bookings, including many out-of-town parties. Prices appeared little changed from last year, averaging around $15 per person for dinner, dancing, entertainment and favors. Some spots went as low as $6, a few as high as $40. In most cases, drinks were extra, except for maybe one round of champagne. A new hotel on the edge of Boston, which set a $15 tab for the usual food and fun, also added a new touch: It urged patrons to remain overnight for $16 a couple extra, with morning-after breakfast in bed.

New York's Waldorf-Astoria Empire Room put the rate for evening at $37.50, including tax. The Copacabana offered its revue, dancing and dinner at $15, $20, or $25, depending on table location. Seattle's biggest private club offered drinks, floor show, dancing and early-morning breakfast of ham and eggs at $6 per person. Omaha's Town House put its evening of food and merry making at $15 a head. In Los Angeles, the Beverly Hilton opens its huge International Room for the first public party at $27.50 per person. At the Moulin Rouge, also in Los Angeles, the rate is $35; at the Coconut Grove, $30. Atlanta, Ga., night spots offer dinners and treats at $12.50. In Denver, Colo., rates for the same package run $10 a person at the Brown Palace Hotel, $25 per couple at the Park Lane. In New Orleans, La., the prices include $25 per head at the Roosevelt Hotel, $22.50 at both the Monteleone and Pontchartrain.

In many night clubs, where meals were not a required part of the evening's bill-of-fare, the cover charges ranged from nothing up, usually around $2 to $5 a person, including entertainment, and all the drinks you're willing to pay for, and can handle.

Parking Woe Is Reported

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Caterers to the carriage trade in the nation's oldest city have a parking problem. City Manager Marvin Grier has given the drivers of the horse drawn carriages, which carry visitors on city tours, until Jan. 15 to solve the problem. The city provides 12 parking spaces along the bayfront but there are 39 carriages in operation, and the drivers aren't allowed to solicit fares except from the 12 bayfront spaces. With the current influx of winter visitors the drivers have been seeking business all over town. Now they must provide their own parking lot.

Canada Network Chief Embarking On New Career

OTTAWA (AP) — Ernest L. Bushnell, 39, chief architect of Canadian broadcasting policy over the last quarter of a century, is embarking on a new career. The temperamental showman is leaving his $18,000-a-year job as vice president of the publicly owned Canadian Broadcasting Corp. on Thursday. He is remaining in the industry — but as a private TV and radio consultant. An Ontario farm boy who started out in show business as a tenor in a traveling quartet, Bushnell is credited with developing the program style followed today in Canada. His soft voice belies an explosive nature. He ran CBC's programming with a dictatorial hand. Bushnell frankly admits he was not as well-educated or as well-read as many of the artists and producers he dealt with. "I figure that if I'm bright enough to hire people who are smarter than I am, then I think I'm bright enough," he explains. But he has had difficulties at times in trying to satisfy everyone in setting a policy for the publicly owned network. Last spring 30 top producers walked out when he ordered a daily radio program of political comment dropped. Bushnell was called before a parliamentary committee and heatedly denied he cut the program because of political pressure. The committee justified it found no evidence to report charges of political interference, but the program was returned to the air.
