Proving Ground Invaded By Russian Scientists; To Test New Rockets

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviets are invading America's favorite testing ground in the Central Pacific to try out a powerful new rocket built for launching heavy earth satellites and space flights to the planets.

The Soviets Thursday night staked out a broad, deserted area 1,100 miles southwest of the Hawaiian Islands for test firings to begin between Jan. 15 and Feb. 15.

Foreign ships and aircraft were warned to steer clear of the target zone — roughly a rectangle 230 miles long and 160 miles wide — during the tests. There was no indication how long they would continue.

Soviet missiles have been sighted coming into the North Pacific in recent months. Shifting the target south into the region of American interest was viewed in some Washington circles as a deliberate move to impress the West with the reliability and accuracy of the Soviet Union's new missile weapons.

The Moscow announcement came less than six hours after President Eisenhower told Congress American intercontinental ballistic missiles have been hitting within a two-mile area from a launching point 5,000 away.

The Soviets did not specify the firing site for their new rocket. The announcement by the official Soviet news agency Tass said only that the tests will be to develop "a more powerful rocket to launch heavy earth satellites and undertake space flights to planets of the solar system."

"With a view to perfecting this rocket with a high accuracy of flight, its launchings without the last stage will be made within the central parts of the Pacific Ocean, removed from places of intensive shipping, air lines and fisheries," it added.

The Soviets indicated they were confident of pin-pointing the rocket landings by announcing that Soviet ships will be sent into the target area to carry out measurements.

But the Soviet Government through Tass asked "governments of nations whose ships or aircraft may find themselves during this period in the vicinity of the area where the rockets might fall" to instruct the ship masters and aircraft captains to refrain from entering the aquarium water area and air space of the Pacific designated.

The range for the Soviet test firings could approximate that for the U.S. Atlas missile.

One possible Soviet launching site is the Kamchatka Peninsula protruding between the Bering Sea and the Sea of the Okhotsk in the northern Pacific. This would be about 3,800 miles from the impact area designated by Moscow for the new tests.

The Soviets followed the same procedure as that used by the United States in warning beforehand of test firings in open international waters.

The U.S. rocket test ranges have stretched from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., to Eniwetok and Bikini Islands in the Central Pacific and from Cape Canaveral, Fla., to Ascension Island in the South Atlantic.

U. S. government legal authorities said there are many precedents for use of the high seas for such experiments as long as they do not interfere unreasonably with activities of other nations and advance notice is given of the danger zones.

However, the zone marked by the Soviets is one used by Japanese tuna fishermen. Leaders of the industry declined comment for the time being, but one spokesman indicated a strong protest would be forthcoming.

The nearest lands to the testing space are two American-owned islands—Palmyra about 250 miles to the east and Johnston Island 400 miles to the north.

The Marshall Islands group, the big U.S. nuclear weapon testing grounds, is about 1,000 miles to the west.

Businessman And Artist Agree To Bury The Hatchet

NEW YORK (AP) — The businessman and the artist were back on good terms today. The artist promised to be a little more businesslike. And the businessman said he still loves art.

"There are no hard feelings," said industrial equipment executive Eugene Gomes. "I like the fellow."

Said sculptor Jacob Lipkin: "He has a soul, after all. It's time we relax and bury the hatchet."

Their trouble arose because Gomes thinks that even artists, much as he likes them, should pay their bills eventually, and because Lipkin doesn't like to deal in such a crass medium as money.

"I never have anything to do with money if I can help it," the 51-year-old sculptor said. "I wanted to give him something beautiful instead."

Gomes, 63, says he tried to understand, but: "What could I do with a two-ton stone camel in my apartment? I'd have no room to live there."

About two years ago, Lipkin obtained some dolly wheels from Gomes' moving-equipment sales company. He wanted them to move heavy stone blocks around his studio. Gomes, who patronizes the arts as a hobby, agreed to let him have the wheels on credit.

Ultimately, however, accountant and art temperament collided.

Lipkin wanted to pay by barter — with a piece of artwork. "That's the way I get along," he said.

"I made my dentist a lovely rooster in wood, and he made me a beautiful bridge in porcelain. Another time I carved a squirrel in stone for my veterinary, who altered one of my Siamese cats. A fair exchange."

Steel Chief Gets Invite

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Steelworkers President David J. McDonald will be considered for one of 42 Pennsylvania delegate-at-large posts to the Democratic presidential nominating convention.

Gov. David L. Lawrence extended an invitation to McDonald to be a delegate to the July convention in a telegram Thursday congratulating the labor leader on the steel contract settlement.

McDonald, who was a Democratic delegate in 1956, said, "I will accept with pleasure, of course, and will make my own determination as to who can best serve our entire nation at the proper time."

He denied he had committed himself to Vice President Richard M. Nixon who was credited with a role in ending the steel dispute.

Endorsement of Lawrence's invitation to McDonald will be required at the Jan. 25 meeting here of the Democratic state committee.
