Property Return Asked

YREKA—C. O. and Sarah Messerall of Montague are plaintiffs in a suit filed December 30 in the Siskiyou County Superior Court against Adrien Rubin, defendant in a judgment voiding a large property trade between the two parties.

Messerall brought the suit against Rubin seeking to annul an agreement of October 15, 1957, for sale and exchange of properties owned by the Messeralls in Ventura County for ranching property in Siskiyou County, owned by Rubin.

Through the judgment, the Messeralls will be restored their Ventura property valued at more than $150,000, which includes buildings and property on seven lots in the town of Santicoy, in return for the property owned by Rubin, which involves several items of farming equipment.

The judgment also restricts Rubin from selling or encumbering the property in Ventura County and has been ordered to restore it free and clear of a deed of trust given by him to Ramona Savings and Loan Company for $15,000 on the property. He is further required to repay $10,473.38, plus interest from October 7, 1959 to the Messeralls in addition to $500 per month interest, until the Ventura property is restored.

A first lien on the ranch property in Siskiyou County was given to the plaintiffs, as security on the defendant's obligations, according to the court judgment filed in the county courthouse at Yreka. In addition, Rubin must pay all court costs.

The cruelty trial of William Olen Gairson, 40-year-old Bonanza ranchhand accused of beating two babies, has been continued until a further order of the court.

District Judge D. E. Van Vactor said a date for the trials, to have been held Saturday, would be set January 20.

At that time Gairson will be given a preliminary hearing on a first degree murder charge. He is accused of killing 11-month-old Gary Lee Bursik by beating the child's head against the floor.

Gary Lee is one of the babies Gairson also is accused of beating under the cruelty charge, cruelty to a child not his own. The other is 3-year-old Billie Joe (Jody) Breeding, now recovering in the county juvenile home.

The babies were sons of Mrs. Ethel Myrtle Bursik, 21, with whom Gairson was living. Both Gairson and Mrs. Bursik have pleaded guilty to lewd cohabitation charges.

Income Tax Facts

Editor's Note: This is one in a series of articles on federal income tax filing. These articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Southern Oregon Society of Certified Public Accountants in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service.

CAR AND HOME DEDUCTIONS

Your home and car may be the source of deductions that will lower your federal income tax. It is important to check all possible deductions because of the savings involved. If you are in the lowest tax bracket—20 per cent—each $5 you can find in deductions will mean a dollar in your pocket. For persons of higher income the possible savings are even greater.

The interest on a mortgage is deductible on your federal tax return. In most cases, payments to a bank include both interest and principal; as the mortgage is reduced the interest is less, and a larger portion is applied to the principal. Only the amount you pay as interest is deductible in the case of your residence.

Sometimes the monthly payment also includes an additional amount which the bank holds for the payment of taxes, insurance, and so on. In this case the bank is acting as your agent in paying tax on your property. Real estate taxes paid for you by the bank are deductible as if you had paid them directly. The important point here is that you can only deduct the amount paid by the bank. For example, you may give the bank $300 over the year toward the payment of taxes, but the tax bill may only come to $341. In this situation you can only deduct $341.

From the time you buy an automobile, you begin to have other expenses which are deductible on your federal income tax return. Any state or local sales tax you paid on the car purchase is deductible. So are the cost of your license plates and interest on an auto loan.

A common deduction in many taxpayers' returns is for state gasoline tax. It is best to keep a record of your gasoline purchases during the year, but if you don't have such a record you can still make a reasonable estimate. For example, you may divide the average number of miles your car runs on a gallon of gasoline into the total miles you have put on the car over the year. This will give you an estimate of the number of gallons consumed. Multiply this by the tax per gallon, and you have a reasonable estimate of the amount you can deduct.

If you had a collision, you may be able to deduct the damage to your own car not covered by insurance. Although your driving may have been faulty, you are entitled to the deduction if the accident was not due to your willful negligence.

Such a loss is determined by subtracting the value of the car after the accident from the value before the accident.

To determine whether or not you contribute more than half of the support for a dependent (one of the tests for claiming an exemption for a dependent), you must consider the value of the roof over the dependent's head. For example, if you provide a room in your house for your mother-in-law, you can consider the rental value of the room as part of your support contribution. This is the amount you could get for the room if you were renting it rather than use it free.

If your mother-in-law lives in her own home, the situation may be quite the reverse. To determine the percentage of her support provided by you, you must consider the rental value of the one in which she lives. The amount she could have rented the home for is considered a contribution toward her own support. For example, suppose your mother-in-law has an income of $500 a year. The rental value of her home, even though she has no intention of renting it, is estimated at $1,500 per year. For tax purposes then, your mother-in-law is said to be contributing $2,000 to her own support for the year. To list your mother-in-law as a dependent, you must have contributed more than $2,000 to her support.

The instruction booklet you receive with your tax form gives further information on federal income tax filing. Help is also available by telephoning or by visiting the offices of the Internal Revenue Service.

Diver's Death To Remain Mystery

EPHRATA, Wash. (AP) — A "giant of a man and one of the best known and most respected" commercial divers on the Columbia River died in its swirling waters Friday at the Priest Rapids Dam site, some 50 miles south of here.

Just how Clarence Shaw, 52, Pasco, Wash., met his death may be "a mystery the river will hold forever," Grant County Coroner Ralph Osborn said today.

Osborn said the 30-year veteran of diving was pulled from the water on the downstream face of the dam under construction, his diving helmet dangling from a strap which held it to a deep sea diving suit he was wearing.

"He drowned," said Osborn, "but just how that helmet came off is a mystery to me as well as a number of professional divers and people in the business who have seen it. It wasn't damaged. They say there was nothing wrong with it. It shouldn't have come off."

"He may have run into a swift eddy which spun him around and slammed him into the face of the dam," said Osborn, "the hit coming in just the right place to knock off his helmet."

Shaw had been working at the 50-foot level of the Grant County Public Utility District dam. There was swift, turbulent water where he was taking wedges from a water outlet channel for one of the dam's generators.

He had been down about an hour when he started to surface. His crew told Osborn that Shaw's helmet popped off of the water, then suddenly he started back down, apparently stumbling off the platform on which he worked.

The veteran diver didn't use a safety line attached to his suit as most divers do, his crew said. Instead a rope was thrown into the water with a piece of railroad track attached. Shaw worked up and down the rope on the platform, giving instructions to his crew to raise or lower the platform by means of a two-way telephone.

The crew didn't have the safety-line to pull up the massive Shaw, obviously in trouble, said Osborn, and they didn't dare pull on the air hose, for fear of ripping it off the helmet and cutting the supply of air to the diver.

The crew feared Shaw had suffered some kind of an attack and was hanging helplessly with but the rubber air hose and the telephone wire keeping him from plunging to the river bottom.

A call went out for two skindivers from nearby Moses Lake and some two hours later, James H. Ling, Jr. and Gene Hellenberg, found Shaw's body in the black water, his helmet whipping back and forth uselessly in the current.

They secured a heavy line around the body and it was pulled up.

Hint Self-Defense Motive In Klamath Falls Killing

Leonard Marvin Lugo testified Friday he was frightened and fearful when he fired six pistol shots that killed Joseph Owen Martinez II early on the evening of August 31.

Lugo's chief defense attorney, Joseph O. Stearns of Portland, asked the 21-year-old defendant why he was afraid, and Lugo answered, "I was afraid of Martinez stabbing me with a knife, possibly killing me."

LUGO OCCUPIED the witness stand during almost all of Friday's session of the first degree murder trial, which will be resumed before Judge David R. Vandenberg Monday morning.

He told of a long afternoon of drinking that developed after he had withdrawn trust money so his

1959 Report Issued By Red Cross

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American Red Cross today said 39 cents of every dollar you gave it last year went to help servicemen and women, veterans, and their families.

The organization's annual report for the 12 months ending last June 30 states that the American people, through their Red Cross and its nearly 3,700 chapters across the country, spent $86,456,167 in providing the health, welfare and safety services which contribute directly to the well-being of every American family.

Other portions of the Red Cross dollar, the report added, were used as follows:

Fifteen cents to collect, process and distribute the whole blood and blood products needed by accident victims and surgery patients.

Eight cents to provide disaster relief.

Eight cents to teach health, safety and nursing courses.

Four cents to help young people become better citizens by joining in Red Cross activities in schools and colleges.

The remainder was spent as follows: six cents on services and assistance to chapters, one for community services, four on membership enrollment and fund raising, two for public information, and 13 for administration and planning in the national organization and its chapters.

Chairman E. Roland Harriman and Red Cross President Alfred M. Gruenther, in forwards to the report, paid tribute to the 44,700,000 contributing members who gave of their hearts and their funds to help make these "good things happen" last year.

Each month, an average of 87,000 servicemen and their dependents and 34,700 veterans and their families were helped in chapters, and 79,500 servicemen were assisted at military hospitals and stations.

The 54 Red Cross regional blood centers, which serve 3,900 hospitals, collected, processed and distributed a total of 2,367,500 pints of blood. No charge is ever made for the blood or its fractions, although hospitals in certain regions do help finance a portion of the cost of handling the blood.

The Red Cross conducted 298 disaster relief operations in which 88,800 persons were given emergency mass care and 17,000 families were helped to rebuild and repair their homes, replace needed household furnishings and occupational tools, and meet their medical and hospital bills.

Red Cross awarded 959,000 certificates to persons completing first aid courses, 1,554,300 to water safety course graduates, 225,500 to persons completing home nursing courses and 2,400 to persons taking volunteer nurse's aide training.

The Red Cross also aided Americans in trouble around the world. It negotiated with the East German Red Cross for the release of 15 U.S. citizens who had been detained in East Germany. And, on the other side of the globe, American Red Cross and family food parcels continued to be turned over each month to representatives of the Chinese Red Cross for delivery to the five Americans still imprisoned in China.

The report lauded the two million volunteer workers whose participation in all phases of Red Cross activities "is evidence of the nation's belief that the common welfare can best be served through voluntary action. . . Obviously, the value of their participation if measured in dollars would reach astronomical proportions."

The report points out that Red Cross volunteer workers outnumber the 13,400 career employees by a ratio of 149 to one.

brother could attend a Washington school. The afternoon included frequent trips between the Office and Vern's Tavern, with a few other bars visited in between.

Early that afternoon he had met 26-year-old Joseph Martinez and had been warned to stop seeing Martinez' estranged wife, Patty Gibbons Martinez. Martinez was thrown out of the bar after three warnings from the bartender, he said.

Lugo said he suspected Martinez was carrying a knife. To illustrate his suspicions, he stood before the jury, ran one hand down his trouser leg, and said, "His (Martinez') pants were tight enough that I saw what I thought was the outline of a knife."

He said Martinez spoke in low tones. "I couldn't hear what he said," he testified, "but I thought he said, 'I'll get you.'"

FROM THE OFFICE he went to Scott Loan Company on Klamath Avenue and bought a .22 caliber semi-automatic pistol. Then more drinks in more bars before he finally saw Martinez at the corner of Seventh and Main streets. Martinez motioned him to come over. "Why did you go over?" Stearns questioned.

"I was hoping Martinez had called me over to tell me to forget about the threat he had made that afternoon," Lugo answered.

He joined Martinez with two other persons in Vern's Tavern.

"Martinez asked me if I was ready," he testified. "I said, 'I guess so.' We went into the alley, when we got back the Broiler, Martinez said, 'This is far enough.'"

"Martinez swung in front of me. His right hand was in his pocket. No words were spoken at all. He lunged at me. I pulled out the pistol and fired."

He said the pistol was in his belt, and he had pulled it in a matter of seconds after Martinez had lunged toward him.

It was then he said he was frightened, and feared Martinez. "Prior to this time," Stearns asked, "did you feel any grudge against Mr. Martinez?"

"No," the defendant said.

THE FRIDAY SESSION did not begin until afternoon. At one time Stearns and Beddoe, familiar trial adversaries, accused each other of improper tactics. Once, Beddoe charged, "Counsel is testifying. He's reiterating. The witness is perfectly capable of testifying for himself."

Stearns objected to the remarks "on the part of the prosecuting attorney," and told the court "I'm not here to engage in a brawl with the district attorney."

Lugo spoke quietly but intelligently from the witness stand. His demeanor remained calm. He was clothed in a charcoal suit with white shirt and white tie.

A prior defense witness, called after the state had entered Lugo's confession into testimony and had rested its case, was Lugo's father, Carlos Lugo, who said there were 14 children in his family.

The trial resumes at 10 a. m. Monday. Lugo will be on the stand for continuation of cross examination.
