

Ex-Brigadier General Marveled God's Work, Now Rector Of Church

RED BLUFF, Calif. (AP)—Lester J. Maitland, who 34 years ago made the first trans-Pacific flight to Hawaii, has become a different sort of sky pilot.

Once Brig. Gen. Maitland, he's

FELINE COMFORT — Belgian actor Pix Mullet is shown letting the cat out of the bag in Rome, Italy. He does this only when he pauses while traveling, for otherwise his pet puss is kept in that special carrying case.

TAKE A BOW—An evening coat takes a great big one for festive evening wear. Designer Jean Patou came up with this idea in Paris, and decorated it with an unusual floral pin worked in diamond and rubies for added chic.

SOLUTION — Milliner Sally Victor has designed hats that won't crush fancy coiffures. This creation is a big taffeta bow, a perky rose and a flattering face veil, that's held in place by a tiny comb.

SEEING EYE — Seven-year-old Julie Ockenden is almost cross-eyed from trying to thread a needle in Epsom, England. She stuck out her tongue while focusing on the operation that required undivided attention.

now the Rev. Mr. Maitland, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in this northern Sacramento Valley lumbering and livestock town.

"I used to speculate as I flew

JET SETS RECORD

ROME (UPI) — A Transworld Airways Boeing 707 intercontinental jet airliner flew from New York to Rome Friday in seven hours 48 minutes to establish a new commercial record for the flight. The plane, which carried 106 passengers and a crew of 12, reached speeds of more than 800 miles an hour.

WHO IS RIGHT?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — How many people live in San Francisco?

The California Taxpayers Association says 790,000 and the city Planning Department last August set the figure at 807,000 San Franciscans.

The biggest figure comes from the local Chamber of Commerce which places the city's population at 821,000.

over the mountains and the great oceans on the insignificance of man's work and the greatness of God," says the much-decorated aviation pioneer. "I began to see that nothing could be finer than serving Him."

This feeling was always there, says Maitland, a vigorous 60, and lifelong member of the Episcopal Church.

"It was a long process," he recalls. "I continued feeling that 'This is what I'm going to do.' The feeling kept getting stronger and stronger until I finally decided to join the ministry."

That was in 1954. He began studying under the Rev. George Selway at St. Paul's in Lansing, Mich., where he was serving as aeronautics commissioner and civil defense director for the state. He took the positions after retirement from the Army Air Corps in 1945.

A period of seminary study followed Maitland's initial work in Lansing, a term of apprenticeship. Then, two years ago, he came here with his wife to take over at St. Peter's.

Maitland's main goal now is to enlarge his 350-member congregation and to build a mission in this community of about 6,000 people.

Before he donned his clerical garb, Maitland's career spanned nearly the entire history of aviation and brought him many honors including two Distinguished Flying Crosses in World War II.

It was a career that began as it ended, in Army war service. In 1917, Maitland left his home in Milwaukee, Wis., at 18 to start out as a test pilot in the fledgling Air Service.

JC PREXY "ARRESTED"

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — Robert Clark of Des Moines, Iowa, national president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, was flown here Friday night "under arrest." Two sheriff's deputies boarded Clark's plane at Columbus, Miss., and clapped him in handcuffs. It was all a joke, but Clark was not aware of it until the plane stopped at Jasper, Ala., where he received the keys to the city and a reprimand for "planning a trip to Alabama without scheduling a stop at Jasper."

When he retired, he left a bombing squadron that for two years had regularly hit targets in Nazi-held Europe with Maitland flying "every mission until they made me quit."

How does a general turned minister feel about his war-making role?

"The bombing was an essential job at the time," Maitland explains. "That's what I was trained for. We all have to reconcile ourselves to this sort of thing."

As for the future, he feels strongly that aviation will help mankind reach peace by shrinking the world and making it easier to get from one place to another. Ultimately, Maitland believes, this will lead to world government.

"Communication and transportation go together," he points out. "We have little trouble with Mexico and Canada because we're close together and can talk to each other, understand each other."

"With air travel, we can do this on a worldwide basis and see that people all over the world are human just as we are. We can get their viewpoints and they can get ours."

"As long as we're talking, we won't be fighting. In the past, we weren't able to do this and we had wars."

"Aviation has to help mankind reach peace. If it doesn't, it will destroy the world."

Maitland played a significant role in aviation's development, serving as an aide to famed Gen. Billy Mitchell and once, in 1923, snapping the world's speed record: 244 miles an hour.

Today, that speed may seem outrageously slow, like the 25 hours and 49 minutes it took Maitland and navigator Albert Hegenberger to make it from Oakland, Calif., to Hawaii on that record 1926 flight.

Although the speeds may not have been exciting by jet standards, the dangers were undoubtedly greater in the early days of aviation.

"We flew planes with one wing, with two wings, with eight wings. And there were no parachutes. I recall at first we thought they were sissy," Maitland says. "I was in so many crashes I can't remember them. I'd like to feel that I was saved to do the job I have started."
