Defense

By FLORENCE JENKINS
The upsurge of interest in Civil Defense on a countywide basis in Klamath County makes a news release from the American Institute of Decorators even more interesting.

This month in Chicago at the Merchandise Mart, the American Institute of Decorators is cooperating with the United States Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization in presenting "The Family Room of Tomorrow."

Marc T. Nielsen, past national president and fellow of the Institute, has designed the interior of a family "fallout" shelter as a game room and guest room which also accommodates a family of four to six persons during an emergency.

Through careful utilization of space, Mr. Nielsen has provided an 8 1/2 x 12-foot area with sleeping equipment for five persons, a lavatory, a sink with a 40-gallon water storage capacity, food for a two-week emergency period, cooking facilities and first aid supplies. There is storage area for clothing, games, reading matter, a transistor television set, a Conelrad radio and other essentials.

A bicycle, says the report, serves the dual purpose of acting as an exerciser and at the same time of ventilating the room. (The ventilating angle is not explained in the release.)

This family room will tour the country after its initial appearance which concludes on January 22. In thanking the Institute for its contribution, the Hon. Leo A. Huegh, director of the office of Civil and Defense Mobilization, states:

"It is not only the policy of the government, but the personal belief of our government leaders that every home should have shelter from radioactive fallout. Thousands of people around the country already are building shelters of various types to accommodate their families and protect them not only from fallout but from natural disasters such as hurricanes and tornadoes."

A subdued color scheme of greys, browns, beiges and sky blue makes a soothing background for this new family room and creates an illusion of space in the overall design, the release concludes.

Western Hicks
Klamath Falls (To the Editor) — Couldn't miss the opportunity to go to a little for us Westerners. Seems that I recall not too many moons ago when New Yorkers and Easterners were laughing at us out here when the Giants and the Dodgers moved to the West Coast.

They gloated and snickered in their beards and said we'd never win a pennant because people on the West Coast were hicks and couldn't support big league teams. Well, in 1959, we won the World Series, and it seems that one of our West Coast teams just ran away with a Rose Bowl game after being six and a half point underdog. And the West just won the East-West game.

Minister Antoine Pinay who is determined to hold to his austerity line against other powerful Gaullists who demand a greater role in industry both for the government and the workers, including Communists. But the powers granted De Gaulle under the new Fifth Republic place him in an unassailable position, and should his present cabinet dissolve, it probably would be replaced by an even more iron-fisted one.

Wounds left by Britain's disastrous invasion of Suez in 1956 still are far from healed, and a new political rumpus is expected in the wake of this week's publication of former Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden's memoirs. Previous "inside stories" have caused brief flareups but these are expected to be as nothing compared to Eden's own version of one of the most controversial incidents in British history.

Look for the Japanese government to come under increasing pressure to restore economic and cultural relations with Communist China. The Reds broke off contact with Japan last year in a lull when Japan refused to combine trade with diplomatic relations. At least two high-ranking politicians — with their eye on the presidency of the ruling Liberal Democratic party and the automatic premiership — are advocating economic and cultural relations with the Peiping regime. It's a popular issue and likely to be the only major one after the U. S.-Japan security treaty is signed.

Congressional Mail
By B. L. LIVINGSTONE
WASHINGTON (AP)—Familiar signs and portents herald the return of Congress to Capitol Hill. Executive communications, for instance.

After three months with practically nobody to write to, agency officials are again busily communicating their hopes and aspirations to legislators.

Returning congressmen hardly had time to hang up their travel souvenirs last week when the mailman was at the door with the first of the new stream of executive communications.

It was from Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, and said he hoped Congress would do something about alien adult honeybees.

Benson suggested Congress amend the Honeybee Act to prevent the importation of adult members of the honeybee families of A. (for Apis) Indica, A. Florea and A. Dorsate.

They have mites, Benson complained. This is no joke, Benson assured Congress, because it could practically wipe out the honey industry in the United States.

Another sure sign Congress is back in business is the return of televised reports to the people.

comes in view. Reserved parking places are carefully protected from tax-paying tourists.

Discreet notices appear, such as: "Effective today, the Capitol police will look with disfavor on persons who do not observe 'do not enter' signs."

Wags have suggested posting of an additional sign saying: "Quiet. 50 billion dollars at work."

Tight Money
By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—Tight money—which seems likely to be around for awhile—is affecting the nation's banks in four ways:

1. It is making it harder for them to find money to lend at a time when the steel settlement seems sure to set off a new boom that should bring a bigger demand for loans to business.

2. It is causing them to raise some interest rates again and to talk at least of the need to hike others.

3. It is fattening their profits from the loans they are making at higher interest charges.

4. It is leading them to seek new lendable funds by paying their stockholders in part by stock dividends to conserve cash, by taking a loss on the sale of older securities now priced far below par, and by luring new depositors by offering better returns on savings.

Bankers see little chance that the demand for loans will ease, except for the seasonal flow back to the banks of funds in January and February when preholiday loans are repaid. Instead they expect the demand to expand because of the desire of industry to build up stocks and to step up activities now that steel labor peace is assured.

Nature study note: A doe can run 48 miles an hour, a buck 49 miles an hour. This explains why the deer population is increasing rapidly.

Boredom is one of civilized man's greatest enemies. A study of 300 men and women who complained of chronic tiredness disclosed only 20 per cent had any organic ailment. In most of the others fatigue was the result of simple boredom.

You can win money by betting your friends they don't know the name of George Washington's favorite horse. It was Blue Skin.

Here's a health tip for barflies. A teacher of orthopedic surgery at Northwestern University reports that "hooking your foot on the rail when you stand at a bar straightens your spine and reduces strain, thus making you more comfortable."

Do you feel you are losing backbone as you grow older? Well, in a way you are. You are born with 32 vertebrae, but fusion reduces them later in life to 26.

A pleasant custom: In Scandinavia, members of a family line up their shoes in a row before going to bed on Christmas Eve. This signifies their equal love for one another and their desire to live in peace together in the coming year.

Smoke gets in my eyes: In the United States now some 55,000 cigars are smoked every three minutes around the clock.

Tule Project Bid Postponed
DENVER (AP)—Bids on two Oregon reclamation projects are expected to be called in February or March, the Bureau of Reclamation says in its Advance Construction Bulletin.

The bid calls expected are on constructing a freight elevator at Prineville Dam in the Crooked River Project, and on constructing a diversion structure and enlarging 2.3 miles of lateral canal in the Talent Project near Ashland.

Postponed bid calls had been listed for pumping plants on the Crooked River Project, near Prineville, and for some four miles of canals and laterals on the Klamath Project at Tule Lake, below the Oregon border.

Lane Demos Oppose Tax

EUGENE (AP)—Lane County Democrats, at a convention Saturday, passed a resolution strongly opposing any sales tax.

The 200 delegates also approved a proposal by Sen. Richard Neuberger (D-Ore.) that Gov. Mark Hatfield name a fact-finding board to consider the Portland newspaper strike.

The resolution criticized publishers of the Oregonian and the Oregon Journal for refusing to agree to such a board.

In other resolutions delegates endorsed the proposed national seashore park on the Oregon coast and called for a full-time permanent parole board, a $1.25 hourly minimum wage and abolition of capital punishment.

Hearing Mulls School Costs

SALEM (AP)—The state's proper share of the cost of state-required education was discussed Saturday at a hearing of the Oregon Legislative Interim Education Committee.

A veteran Oakridge educator, Paul S. Elliott, said the state should pay everything it requires. It now pays, overall through Oregon districts, about 39 per cent of operations costs.

He recalled when he was in school nearly 60 years ago. "The teacher," Elliott said, "was custodian and the two out-houses were cleaned twice a year by members of the school board."

In those days, he added, the local district was in complete charge but now state standards govern all teachers, curriculum and buildings.

Leonard Mayfield, Medford, said the state should pay for all of its required program and 49 per cent of construction costs. He added that some local control would be insured by the 49 per cent limit on state construction payments.

Among possible means discussed for financing increased state aid were a sales tax, a timber assessment and broadening of the income tax base.

The hearing wound up a two-day committee session. Another is scheduled for Feb. 5-6 at Eugene.

SHORT RIBS By Frank O'Neal

BERLIN — West Berlin student Klaus Grabert, after watching a French-made film on Nazi concentration camps:

"Now I know why our parents and teachers always tell us about the 'gay 20's' but never about the gorilla 30's."

FAIRBANKS, Alaska — Air Force Capt. William A. Culling, reporting that morale is good among 20 men at the scientific station on the disintegrating ice floe Charlie:

"Everyone seems unconcerned."

WASHINGTON — The National Geographic Society, noting that a recent quarrel between two chiefs from Formosa's once-wild eastern frontier shows civilization is advancing there:

"Instead of reverting to the depiction of each other — and their hapless subjects — the two rivals held press conferences to air their differences."

WASHINGTON — Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.), stating that he considers the Wisconsin primary important in his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination:

"If I don't win in Wisconsin, then in the slogan of the current administration I'll have to make an agonizing reappraisal."
