INSECTICIDE DANGER

ST. PAUL (UPI)—There is no such thing as a non-poisonous insecticide, says the Minnesota State Medical Association. All insecticides contain poison or else they would not kill bugs. Not all insecticides are fatal to humans, but they can cause discomfort if eaten or if they get into the eyes, nose or throat. The association suggests treating all insecticides as if they are deadly poison; taking care not to use kitchen utensils to mix or store them, keeping them from children and washing fruits and vegetables which have been sprayed.

CONSUMER GOODS PRODUCTION

Mid-Year Comparisons
(Second Quarter, 1957-1960)

GOODS NEWS—The comeback in the production of durable consumer goods is shown in chart above. During the 1957-58 recession, most items declined, some as much as 30 per cent. Since April, 1958, average production has risen more than 50 per cent. Data from National Industrial Conference Board.

matter of FACT

The oxides of a group of little-known metals are called "rare earths," a name given them in the early days of chemistry because they resembled the substances then called "earths." Probably because of their rarity, not many uses have been found for them. Cerium is the only one of the large number of "rare earth" metals that has any commercial importance.
