

BB'S BABY—Actress Brigitte Bardot and her actor-husband, Jacques Charrier, cuddle their two-day-old son, Nicolas, in the couple's Paris home. Shortly after the pair were married Charrier was drafted into the French army, but was released because of "nervousness." Nicolas is the French sex-kitten's first child. She was married previously to director Roger Vadim.

Money Voted To Econ Class

DUNSMUIR — Dunsuir Rotary Club voted $12.50 to the high school home economics class at its weekly luncheon meeting at the Hotel Dunsuir. The gesture was in appreciation of a recent luncheon served the club by the class members. The fund will be used for the purchase of linens by the class.

European travel is within the scope of the average American family, Peggy Walsh, guest speaker, told Rotarians. A trip to Europe is a worthwhile family undertaking, she said, from the standpoint of enjoyment, exploration of our heritage and increased understanding of other peoples.

Reds Honor Propagandist On Eightieth Birthday

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

The Soviet Union this week honored a rotund, jolly old man with gray handle-bar mustaches and a gay twinkle who can look back on a remarkable career in the Communist science of applied abuse.

He has turned in some extraordinary work. There was, for example, his prediction that some day American kiddies would be playing with miniature models of Nazi torture chambers and mass death camps, or even nice little model cholera bombs. The American toy makers were against international control of nuclear weapons, he wrote, because they were getting rich by perverting American children with atom bomb toys.

That was back in 1951, when David Iosifovich Zaslavsky, a vigorous 71, was in his heyday as chief propagandist for the Soviet Communist party. After Stalin died in 1953, Zaslavsky faded for a while, but he returned with a bang a few years ago and is still in action.

This week, in honor of his 80th birthday, the Supreme Soviet, or Parliament, awarded Zaslavsky the Order of Lenin. That was pretty good for a man once jailed by the Bolsheviks as a follower of Stalin's arch-enemy Trotsky.

A veteran of 35 years as a hatchet man for Soviet internal and international propaganda, Zaslavsky's career is a study in the making of a trained character assassin.

At 20 Zaslavsky was active among the Social Democrats and in the Jewish Bund in Kiev, writing under a variety of names. At the time of the revolution he was a Menshevik, a follower of Trotsky, and was jailed by the Bolsheviks when the tide turned. Zaslavsky confessed his sins, abjectly in Pravda. By 1928 he was a staff contributor to that central Communist party paper. He did not become a party member until 1939 and never held any high party office. His field was strictly propaganda.

CHARGED WITH MURDER
COOKEVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Ralph Anderson, 21, a student at Tennessee Tech, was arrested on murder charges Friday night in the drowning of his 20-year-old bride. Police charged Anderson drove his car into Burgess Falls Lake and shoved his wife back into the water after she had climbed out of a window.

During the war he pledged the Soviet Union to no interference of any kind after the war in the affairs of other nations. But long before the war ended, Zaslavsky was denouncing the Western Allies. When the United Nations conference at San Francisco rolled around in 1945, he accused the West of plotting against Moscow. The West, he wrote later, made a fetish of the atom bomb. Americans, he said, approached Europe's shattered economy with "healing medicine in one hand and a doctor's bill in the other."

A fast man with an epithet, Zaslavsky concocted such descriptions of Americans as "gangsters of the pen," "refugee of the stock market," and "savages."

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, for looking into Soviet spy activity, was to him an organization of criminal conspirators and handis bent on "forgery, provocation and perjury." The postwar spy probe in Canada was "a provocative plundering of secret documents" and "a disgraceful comedy."

Zaslavsky's latest big blast — fewer as he approached 80 — included a hatchet job on Boris Pasternak, author of "Doctor Zhivago." Zaslavsky labeled Pasternak a vicious slanderer, a "surviving relic of the pre-revolutionary past," a "malevolent Philistine," a "smudge on Socialist Society" and several other things to boot.

Those who have met Zaslavsky say there is one notable trait about him: He just loves fun.
