Paris Unveils Spring Styles

PARIS (AP) — The fashion showings for spring 1960 started today when a model—in a black dress, with a flared skirt just covering the knee, nipped in waist and big white cape collar—walked out in the Jacques Griffe salon.

The show went on with straight sheath dresses that seemed to flatter the figure. Some were in silk prints. A loosely floating, slightly gathered skirt panel hung down the front and back of a few.

Deep batwing sleeves on coats and jackets and many flat-pleated skirts highlighted the first spring collection. Orange and rose hues vied with sober navy, beiges, and greige or gray-beige, with flashes of black and white.

Griffe belted most waistlines about an inch below normal, with cloth or patent leather belts that slipped through side slots and dipped sharply in the back.

A few of these were breathlessly tight for a real wasp waistline, but most were semislack, as were his unbelted suit jackets.

Collared necklines stood off from the throat and dipped in a deep V front. But many svelte, sleeveless sheaths were collarless, with draped bodices cut either square or high or rounded widely at the neck. Some of these were buttoned all the way down the front or back.

According to preopening hints, others may be tired of big collars, but Griffe is still giving them a ride.

Lightweight wool crepes and both floral and abstract printed silks make most of his day collection.

Hoods attached to afternoon dresses can be dropped for a draped collar effect, or worn up with matching silk print sheath coat.

There are some reversible wool tweed coats over dresses matching one side of the coat.
