Two Stranded By Flooding

OREGON CITY (AP) — Two Portland men were stranded by rising water on a small island in the middle of the Clackamas River Sunday.

Police floated a rubber raft out to them and pulled them to shore. The men, Wayne Wilbur Rudy, 28, and Kenneth N. Mills, 28, had waded out to the island to fish. They couldn't get back when the river's flow was increased by the release of water from an upstream dam. A passerby noted their plight

New Depth Dive Produces Only Few Ordinary Fish

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jules Verne would have been disenchanted and his "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" would need a new plot. No giant squid materialized on the ocean floor. No slimy monsters slithered through the mud at the bottom of the Pacific. Only a few ordinary looking fish swam about. That's the report Swiss scientist Jacques Piccard brought back from the ocean depths. Man can shed his horror of the briny deep, he said. Piccard and Navy Lt. Don Walsh, San Diego, shut themselves in a bathyscaphe Jan. 22 and descended more than seven miles to the Pacific Ocean floor, details of the record dive to an estimated 37,000 feet. His report may disappoint those who have taken imaginary voyages with French author Verne and cringed while fictional heroes battled sea monsters. The animal life in the once mysterious abyss was more common place—shrimp and bony fish.
