

Inquiry Of Space Group Has Many Hurdles To Pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — An historic inquiry by the Inter-American Peace Committee into alleged violations of human rights in the Dominican Republic appeared possible today.

The investigation was asked of the Organization of American States Monday by Venezuela in the wake of reports of mass arrests in the Dominican Republic.

If it does result, the inquiry has first to pass hurdles within the OAS and within the Peace Committee itself.

From Venezuela, meantime, came reports that a revolt aimed at toppling the regime of Generalissimo Rafael Trujillo may come at any time. Trujillo denies his dictatorship is in trouble.

The OAS Council referred the Venezuelan request to its General Committee which was to determine how the council should proceed. In a closed meeting Tuesday, the committee reportedly concluded the matter could best be handled by the five-nation Peace Committee.

A working group of five nations resumes late today its work of preparing a draft resolution for the General Committee and the OAS Council.

The resolution, diplomatic sources said, probably will express the concern of the council at violations of human rights, but note that the Peace Committee has special authority to act in this instance.

Venezuela then could take its request to the Peace Committee, or the committee itself could undertake the investigation on its own under authority given by a 1953 meeting of Western Hemisphere foreign ministers.

Venezuela is a member of the Peace Committee along with the United States, Mexico, El Salvador and Uruguay but would be disqualified from sitting. A special fifth member would have to be named by the OAS Council.

The Venezuelan reports of impending Dominican revolt came from diplomatic sources in contact with Dominican exiles in Caracas.

They said the exiles are seeking to join forces for an orderly transition to democratic government if and when Trujillo falls.

SLIGHT PAUSE

ANSONIA, Conn. (UPI)—A fire truck had to stop to rewind 2,000 feet of hose which unreeled while it was speeding to a blaze. When firemen finally arrived, the fire was out.

GOING TO THE DOGS

DETROIT (AP) — Suburban Lincoln Park is going to the dogs. Thanks to Mayor Jack Johns the canines won out in a proposal which would have limited each household to two dogs. The City Council was deadlocked 3-3 on the issue until the mayor cast his ballot against it.

He owns one dog.
