

Pasture Betterment Expert Addresses Soil District

Guest speaker at the 11th annual meeting of the Klamath Soil Conservation District was Dr. A. L. Hafenrichter, a man who is probably the top expert on the Pacific Coast on all phases of pasture improvement.

"Unless you can carry two cows per acre on irrigated pasture in land capability classes 2 and 3, you aren't even beginning to use good pasture management practices," Dr. Hafenrichter told the crowd of more than 60 persons at Midland Grange Hall Tuesday evening.

He brought a report of all of the experimental work being carried on by the Soil Conservation Service on quantity and quality of pasture forage and its relation to production of meat and milk.

Dr. Hafenrichter has worked for more than 30 years in development of new varieties of grasses and legumes and has taken wheatgrass seed from Klamath Marsh to the Pullman, Washington, SCS plant materials center for comparative testing.

"One of our real needs right now is to develop some good seed producers of these new varieties," the speaker declared. "Several important new ones are in very short supply this year. One of them is creeping meadow fxtail, another is Topaz wheatgrass and a third is Cascade lotus. We are hoping that the very new and especially high quality orchard grass (with the variety named Latar) will be released for production under certification in Oregon this year because the demand is high.

"These grasses and legumes can provide all of the nutrients that a cow needs to maintain a high level of milk production for the pasture season, or about 70 per cent of the nutrients she needs in a year," Dr. Hafenrichter stated.

The introduction of new plant materials on pastureland in this area has resulted in increased beef production, the speaker said, paying high compliments to the Klamath Experiment Station and Gene Gross, station superintendent.

"There are beef producers here getting up to 1,000 pounds of gain per acre on irrigated pasture per season," he said.

Dr. Hafenrichter was introduced by Leon Andrieu, chairman of the Klamath Soil Conservation District Board, who presided at the business meeting.

During election of officers, Robert Embree of Pine Grove was reelected to a three-year term on the board. Howard Holliday, Keno Road, was elected to a three-year term, replacing John Kerns on the board of directors.

Other directors are Bob Petrik, Merrill; James Flowers, Worden; Myron Taylor, Spring Lake; Phil Blohm, Malin, and Andrieu.

The board will meet the first Monday in March to elect officers for 1960.

Southerners Back Down

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bowling to the inevitable, diehard Southerners reluctantly agreed today to let the House consider civil rights legislation.

Chairman Howard W. Smith (D-Va.), leading foe of northern-backed civil rights proposals, called a meeting of the House Committee to take formal action clearing the legislation for House action in mid-March. An informal agreement to act was reached Wednesday.

A civil rights bill approved by the House Judiciary Committee has been pigeonholed in Smith's committee since last August because a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats wouldn't turn it loose. Hearings were started last week, but took a leisure pace.

The coalition broke apart Wednesday, under apparent political pressure.

Youth Officer Gives Budget

Members of Klamath County Juvenile Advisory Committee read a tentative draft of a proposed new budget for the Klamath County juvenile department for the next fiscal year at their Tuesday afternoon meeting.

In presenting the figures, Francis Mathews, juvenile director, explained that this was the estimated amount needed. Copies of the final draft of the budget will be prepared by Mathews' office and mailed to committee members for study and comparison with the actual expenditures of the department last year.

All of the members were present except Mrs. Paul Buck who was out of the city. Wilbur McKinney, Klamath Union High School principal, had been invited to attend in order to gain a clearer picture of the duties and activities of the group, but he was not present.

Mrs. V. E. O'Neill, chairman, said further study is being given to holding meetings at times when Judge Charles H. Foster can be present.

Landscape Design Course Offered At Oregon State

The first course in the Landscape Design Short Course School is scheduled for May 5-7, at Oregon State College in Corvallis. Oregon is now the second state in the West to sponsor the school. California was the first with its initial course at the University of California at Berkeley in April 1959.

The school, as approved by National Council of State Garden Clubs, includes four courses in Landscape Design, each of which consists of reading assignments and eleven hours of lectures by qualified instructors over a two-day period, followed by a two-hour examination on the third day.

The course is co-sponsored by Oregon Federation of Garden Clubs, Oregon State College Landscape Department, and the Extension Service. Early registrants receive a manual containing outlines of all lectures of the instructors. Receiving a copy early will enable the student to study the outlines in advance of the course. The fee is $10, plus $1 for the examination.

The reading assignments are an important feature of the course. There are two books on both the required and the reference list. The required reading includes "The Art of Home Landscaping," by Garrett Eckbo, and "The American Skyline," by Tunnard and Reed. The reference reading includes "Art and Nature Appreciation" by George Odyke, and "Garden Design," by Sylvia Crowe. If not available at the local library, they may be purchased through the National Council Books. "American Skyline" may be obtained from local or Portland bookstores for 50 cents.

The course is not limited to garden club members, however. In addition to home grounds improvement program, the course has a special appeal for landscape architects, nurserymen, city planners, park board members, highway commissioners.

Limited housing facilities are available for both men and women at Oregon State College dormitories. Copies of the program may be obtained from the Extension Service, Oregon State College, Corvallis, or from local garden club presidents.

"The Art of Home Landscaping" by Eckbo, has been a subject of the garden club Landscape Study Groups throughout the state for the past year. Every club in the state, over 300 in all, has received an outline of Eckbo's book to be used in conjunction with the text.

Prospective students are advised to study these books before the opening of the first course. For more detailed information, call TU 4-8215, or contact the local Extension Service.
