KF Evangelist Candidate For 'Mother Of The Year'

By RUTH KING

Honor came last week to the Rev. Caroline Marie Timms who has spent most of her lifetime, much of it in Klamath Falls, ministering to humanity, spiritually and physically.

Her name has been submitted by the United Church Women of Klamath Falls in competition in this state for Oregon Mother of the Year. The honor in 1959 went to Mrs. Harlan P. Bosworth of Medford.

The Rev. Mrs. Timms is nearing 85 years and continues as pastor of the Gospel Mission of the United Holy Church of America where a two-week's evangelistic effort has just been concluded. She is in the pulpit for every church service and her home is a mecca for those of her congregation who need counseling.

She lives at 217 Klamath Avenue, surrounded by photographs of her family, cherished mementoes, and friends.

She modestly disclaims accomplishment that would have earned her statewide recognition, but her long ministry which began more than half a century ago, and her aid to her family under difficult circumstances, is probably not equaled in Southern Oregon or perhaps in all the state.

The history of her work dates back to the time she left her Tennessee birthplace, still shadowed by the Civil War, to establish the first social center for colored people in Chicago. Her grandfather and her father, who later entered the ministry had been slaves.

The young woman who later was to come to Klamath Falls to help establish the first church for colored people here, carried the story of Christianity into the saloons of Chicago. She adopted a small boy, the son of a sister, and turned Westward to join the man she was to marry, the Rev. William E. B. Timms. They were married the day after she arrived by boat up the river on December 19, 1868.

She too had been ordained in Chicago and together the two Reverend Timms established the Union Gospel Mission, an independent church. Her husband was a graduate of the Theological School of Tuskegee University, founded by the late Booker T. Washington and had pastored a church in West Point, Mississippi.

Following his death in 1929, she carried on alone, buffeted by the depression years and the struggle to clothe, feed and educate her growing family of eight, including adopted Clarence. Four of the children are still living.

During the lean years when money was hard to get, Mrs. Timms said this week, "We had been trying to buy some lots to build a church. There was still a $200 indebtedness, owed to the city, and the children and I often didn't eat to save grocery money to pay on the lots."

Her name has been submitted by the United Church Women of Klamath Falls in competition in this state for Oregon Mother of the Year. The honor in 1959 went to Mrs. Harlan P. Bosworth of Medford.

highway department in reimbursement for the land. Other lots were bought and with $800 in the building fund, a sanctuary for worship was put up.

As her family grew through early school years, each one set up a goal for higher education, encouraged by their mother, who "helped when I could." They went away to other cities, worked and saved. One went into the armed services. Others continued to study to realize their goals.

Leap Year Lad To Celebrate

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP)—Allen Orwin, 4, is going to celebrate his first birthday next week, and he's a little miffed about it. Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Orwin, was born Leap Year's day 1956. His friends have been having birthday parties and presents every year since. But there has been no Feb. 29 until this year.

Double Funeral

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP)—A double funeral will be held Wednesday for Fred W. Staples, 68, a machinist, and his wife, Blanche, 66, who died within 10 hours of each other Monday.

Today, Dr. William E. Timms is a physician-surgeon in Los Angeles. Walter Timms holds a responsible position with the city administration of Oakland. Dr. Mac Timms is a chiropodist in Oakland, and Alice Timms the only daughter, also in Oakland, is head counselor in the unemployment division of the Veteran's Administration. Mrs. Timms has five grandchildren, three of them adopted.

In recent years she weathered one more crisis, the loss of her church when heavy snows of a past winter crushed the roof. Services and Sunday School classes were held in her small home for many months. She kept her congregation together.

She never doubted that another church would be built and it was, through her efforts, efforts of her congregation and with donations of labor, materials and cash.

Today, it stands at 251 Commercial Street as a monument to the Rev. Caroline Marie Timms.

MACARTHUR IMPROVES NEW YORK (UPI)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur "continues to show normal progress" recovering from a urological ailment, Lenox Hill Hospital reported Monday. The 80-year-old MacArthur was hospitalized Jan. 29.
