

Training Set For Members

City police Junior Rifle Club members will go afield for training during the next couple of weeks. Previous on-land training simulated real hunting conditions during the last couple of weeks.

The youngsters, 103 of them this session, are required to make the trip before they are eligible to be graduated from the current hunter safety course.

The course will be the last of the youngsters until next fall.

When they are graduated, the youngsters will have to be able to shoot straight and safely by policemen, who volunteer their time, will number close to 1,000. This session will have lasted 10

DDS Appointed To C of C Board

Dr. Mel Amsberry, a children's dentist, has been named to the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce Board of Governors.

Dr. Amsberry replaces David R. Vandenberg Jr., who resigned. His term runs until September 30, 1961.

The appointment was announced last night at a chamber governors meeting.

Dr. Amsberry will be the director in charge of the community relations with the hospital survey now being conducted by Stanford Research Institute.

Small Plant Picks Klamath As Work Site

Another small industry has chosen Klamath Falls for a plant location. It was revealed at a number of commerce luncheon Wednesday.

The industry is to be a metal fabricating plant of Armo Drainage and Metal Products Inc. of Portland. The plant, to employ from seven to 10 persons at the start, will fabricate corrugated culvert pipe.

Chamber President Bill Graham announced the location at the start of a series of President's Reports luncheons following chamber board of directors meetings. Various subject of chamber activities were covered.

Armo will be located on Broad Street land leased from Great Northern, reported Paul Cruikshank, G. superintendent and director in charge of the chamber's industrial development committee. A plant is being remodeled now, and production is expected to begin in a month or so.

Graham also reported on these chamber activities:

The first attempt to drill a hot water well on the OTI campus site was abandoned after reaching a depth of 120 feet. However, the well hit cold water that may be sufficient to supply campus water needs. A second hot water well is being drilled, and has reached a depth of 430 feet, with promise.

A request to city council to erect a sign at the south entrance of the West Side Bypass was dropped by council after a second reading. The chamber's tourist and convention committee hopes to negotiate some type of sign directing traffic to the city center.

The "Action Course in Practical Politics" sponsored by the chamber on a nonpartisan basis is being completed this week by four groups. Attendance by some 50 enrolled persons has averaged from 90 to 95 per cent on the eight weeks of the course.

West Coast Airlines continues to give the city poor service. Graham suggested the chamber offer what assistance it can to the airline office here, and perhaps bring its complaints to the home office again.

Graham also reported on a Portland convention of chamber managers and officers he and Manager Frank Tucker attended last month. He found most suggestions already in practice in Klamath County, and said the local chamber's system of having board of directors meetings in private homes was well received.

Crews Seeking Missing Hunters

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—The Air Force continued to search Thursday for two polar bear hunters whose plane was forced down on an ice floe in the Chukchi sea last Friday.

Two C-119s were used in the search of the ice and waters south and west of Point Hope, Alaska, in continuing good weather Wednesday. No sign of the missing men was reported.
