Swine Test Program Set

Dates have been set for entering pigs in the new Oregon swine testing station near Hermiston.

Standard dates for entry of pigs into the station were set for April 15 to May 15 for the spring test period, and October 15 to November 15 for the fall test period, reports Dr. David C. England, Oregon State College animal husbandman in charge of the industry-sponsored station. Dates were established by Oregon swine growers.

Applications for the coming spring test should be made between February 10 and March 20, England said. These should be sent in to the station soon after the litter is farrowed. Application blanks will be available in county extension offices after February 1.

An entry fee of $10 per pig must accompany each application. This fee will be refunded if the swine producer notifies the station two weeks before the pigs are due to be entered that the litter failed to meet entry performance requirements.

Only change in performance requirements for entry since the station opened last fall has been a change in time of meeting weight requirements. All breeds will now use 35-day weights, England said. County extension agents will have a detailed list of weight requirements for each breed.

The swine association also agreed to invite Washington and Idaho swine producers to have pigs tested at the station if Oregon producers don't use all the space. Oregon applications will be filled first, England said, and any space available after March 20 will be opened to Washington and Idaho applicants.

Twelve Oregon swine breeders now have a total of 64 purebred pigs on test at the station. The test is expected to be completed about April 1, and a sale of tested pigs may be held at that time.

HORATIO ALGER

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Young and handsome Mark Russell has graduated from mail room boy and still photography clerk at Paramount Studios to be a featured acting role in "Visit To A Small Planet." Jerry Lewis, who stars in the Hal Wallis production, was largely responsible for Russell's success in landing the part after the young actor confided his ambitions to Jerry, whose office and dressing room were on Mark's mail route.
