

CITY BRIEFS

Adult Red Cross standard first aid classes, to run each Wednesday night for five weeks will begin tonight, March 9, at the VFW Hall, 515 Klamath Avenue. Hours will be from 7 to 9 p.m. The classes are open to the public.

Women's Circles of First Presbyterian Church will meet Thursday, March 10, as follows: Naomi, 10 a.m. fireside room of church.

Malin High Wins Trophy

Malin High School won permanent possession Monday of a trophy signifying the school has won the annual county school speech festival three of the last five years.

Gilchrist High School placed second and Merrill High School third. The festival was conducted at Henley High School. Students from the above schools and from Bonanza and Chiloquin high schools competed in these events: Serious interpretation, radio speaking, poetry recitation, impromptu speaking, panel discussion, persuasive speaking, extemporaneous speech, after dinner speaking and humorous interpretation.

Winners of each category received ribbons and points depending on which of the first four places they won. Points were totaled, and the school with the most won the festival.

Each participating county school has a choice of sending two winners from each category to a district meet to be held at Henley High School soon.

Two winners from each category there then will be eligible to compete in the state festival at the University of Oregon later.

In Different States

TERRA ALTA, W.Va., (AP) — Charles Falkenstein and his new daughter were born in the same house but in different states.

Falkenstein, 36, a bus driver lives in the Cranestown section about 12 miles from Terra Alta. When he was born, the house was listed as part of Maryland.

Between then and the birth of his daughter last Saturday night a survey showed it to be in West Virginia.
