Snowslide Kills Worker

DRIGGS, Idaho (AP) — A snowslide engulfed three power company linemen Wednesday in an east Idaho canyon. One man dug himself and a companion free, but the companion later died of exposure.

The search for the third man, 46-year-old Cleo Howard of Ashton, Idaho, was temporarily halted late Wednesday night when a heavy snow shower struck the area.

The man who died was William Collette, 36, Ashton, a father of five. The lone survivor, 29-year-old Russell Paskett, also of Ashton, was hospitalized and placed under sedation.

All three worked for the Fall River Rural Electric Co. and were snowshoeing through Horseshoe Canyon in search of a power line break when the avalanche bore down on them.
