

Africa Tour Impressions Given By Billy Graham

By BILLY GRAHAM
 VICTORIA FALLS, Southern Rhodesia (UPI) — All I have read about Africa over the years failed to prepare me adequately for what I have seen and heard and felt during the past five weeks.

I have seen the wonder and grandeur of nature. I have flown over great rain forests, lowering mountains and broad rivers, I have shouted with exhilaration at the sight of great herds of elephants, water buffaloes, zebras and giraffes.

I have stood in awe at the splendor of Victoria Falls which are unequalled anywhere in the world. I have floated down the Zambezi River with hippopotami in full view, and skimmed ten feet over its surface in an airplane as crocodiles basked in the sun.

I have seen baboons in trees and fed wild monkeys who grabbed food out of my hands.

Once I came within an inch of being dunked in the Zambezi as Africans were carrying me in a great like the one in which the great missionary explorer David Livingstone travelled.

But my most fascinating experiences of this trip to Africa have been the many encounters with people of many tribes and tongues. I have met them in modern office buildings which I had anything in New York, and I have talked with them in primitive market places and villages where the mode of dress (and underwear) and cooking pots are just like those found by the earliest explorers.

Anyone who says the African is hostile to Americans doesn't know what he is talking about.

I did not see a hostile glance or gesture. Never have the members of my team received such cordial, warm hospitality. Most Africans seem not to associate the United States with colonialism and imperialism.

My most outstanding impression of my West African tour was the tremendous contribution Christian missionaries made to its development. I'm convinced that schools, hospitals and churches brought by missionaries have saved this part of the world from a possible bloodbath.

Everywhere I found people hungry for the Gospel. I have had the privilege of preaching to some of the largest crowds of my ministry. The people were quiet, dignified and reverent. There was no more emotional display than we have seen in America or England.

Our appeal for people to accept Christ was totally different.

In most places we did not ask them to come forward, but rather invited them to stay behind if they wanted to break with their sins and old gods, and trust Christ for the first time.

I urged them not to respond unless they were willing to break with the past, join a church and live a totally new life.

They were urged not to respond if they had ever made a Christian commitment before.

Yet hundreds came, and faithful helpers talked with them in little groups that dotted great race courses and stadiums for hours after our meetings closed.

I believe they were as sincere as I have ever seen.

Life In Jail Top Penalty For Crime In Nine States

By BERNARD GAVZER
 AP Newsfeatures Writer

U.S. foreign affairs seem far removed from the fate of a condemned criminal. But as events of last week show, the question of capital punishment is one that arouses passions everywhere.

Caryl Chessman, convicted of heinous crimes, has avoided execution for nearly 12 years. Recently, when it seemed certain there were no other avenues for him, he was granted another reprieve.

California Gov. Edmund Brown said he granted the reprieve in part because of word from the State Department suggesting Latin Americans might use the execution as a cause for demonstrations during President Eisenhower's tour.

The argument regarding Chessman is not so much concerned with his innocence or guilt as it is with two other questions: Should the death penalty be abolished? Even if not abolished, should it be imposed in this case after so long a delay since original sentencing?

The propriety of the death penalty has been debated in virtually all the states at one time or another. There has been growing pressure to abolish it and the latest state to do so was Delaware. In granting the 60-day Chessman reprieve, Governor Brown called on the California Legislature to consider a moratorium on the death penalty. He personally favors making life imprisonment the state's maximum penalty.

In brief, here are the two major points of view:

Police strongly contend that the threat of death helps protect them in dealing with criminals, particularly when they are apprehending a criminal. And they also insist that the vision of death in an electric chair or a hangman's noose acts as a powerful deterrent to crime.

Opponents say there is no proof that the death penalty is a deterrent. And they say that capital punishment violates our concept of rehabilitation and retribution and makes possible irredeemable miscarriages of justice.

However the argument is ultimately resolved, this is what the situation is at this moment in the United States:

The federal government has the power to inflict the death penalty. It may do so if a person is convicted of (1) murder in the first degree, (2) rape, (3) bank robbery, (4) kidnapping, (5) treason, (6) espionage in time of war, (7) sale of heroin to a juvenile, and (8) causing the destruction of an aircraft.

The 41 states with capital punishment vary in methods of execution and in number of crimes for which the sentence can be imposed. Georgia has 14 capital crimes on its statutes for which death can be demanded. In general, however, the death penalty is sought essentially and basically for one major crime — first degree murder.

Alaska, Delaware, Hawaii, Main, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Rhode Island and Wisconsin do not have capital punishment. The maximum penalty in these nine states is life imprisonment.

Of the 41 which do inflict the death penalty, these are the methods used:

BOMB "RED" BOOKSTORE

PARIS (UPI) — Someone threw a "Molotov cocktail" gasoline bomb through the display window of a bookstore specializing in Communist literature Sunday. Firemen were able to douse the blaze before there was extensive damage.

Shortly after its discovery by the French in 1905, Nova Scotia had its first social club. It was founded by Champaign to relieve "the boredom of wilderness life."
