

Forces Of Syngman Rhee Capture Landslide Win

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Syngman Rhee's forces won the presidency and vice presidency of South Korea today in a landslide after a bloody election the opposition charged was rigged. The anti-Rhee Democratic party promised a court contest.

Post-election violence flared anew as demonstrators, disgruntled with the outcome of the voting, scuffled today with police in front of the Democrats' Seoul headquarters.

At least 7 and perhaps up to 11 persons were reported killed Tuesday in election violence. All but one died in a seven-hour battle between police, Democrats and students at Masan, 250 miles south of Seoul.

Rhee, whose Democratic party opponent died a month ago after a stomach operation, won his fourth four-year term with a record popular vote.

Assembly Speaker Lee Kipoong, 63, overwhelmingly defeated John M. Chang of the Democrats, who had bested Lee in the 1956 vice presidential race by 200,000 votes.

The vice presidential race was of major importance because of the possibility the aged president might not live out his term. But Rhee is much more vigorous than Lee, who has difficulty speaking and walking and has rarely left his home in the past two years. He reportedly has a nerve disorder as well as rheumatism.

Returns from 178 of South Korea's 187 counting districts gave Rhee 8,940,823 votes, Lee 7,797,940 and Chang 1,800,865.

For reelection Rhee needed votes from only one-third of the nation's 11,194,490 voters. His total was far above the 3,046,437 votes he polled in 1956, when he was opposed by another dead Democrat and the leader of a since-outlawed party.

Several hundred thousand invalid ballots were cast in Seoul; apparently for the dead Democratic presidential candidate, Chough Pyong-ok, whose name remained on the ballot. The total for Chough was not disclosed.

Rhee and Lee will be inaugurated Aug. 15. Should Rhee die before then, Chang as incumbent vice president would succeed him and a new election would be called. Rhee will be 85 on March 26.

Rhee and Lee were in seclusion and issued no victory statements. Chang angrily denounced the election as "the worst we have ever seen" and said his party would file suit within 30 days seeking to invalidate the election.

Chang said the Democrats have more than 1,000 exhibits showing fraud in the election, including ballot box stuffing and the ouster of hundreds of Democratic poll observers.

Okay Asked To Build Dam

WASHINGTON (AP) — A public power group asked the Federal Power Commission Tuesday for authority to build a 276 million dollar dam at the Nez Perce site on the Snake River.

The application by Washington Public Power Supply System is expected to set the stage for another round in the public-private power controversy in the Pacific Northwest.

Pacific Northwest Power Co. has filed an application to build a dam at Mountain Sheep, above the Nez Perce site on the Snake. PNP is a combine of four private utility firms.

If either of the dams is built, it will make the other unfeasible.

The Washington Public Power Supply System is made up of 13 public utility districts in the state.

The proposed dam would have an initial installed capacity of 1,200,000 kilowatts from six generators.

Supporters Of Dictator Rounded Up

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Army-led police strengthened by a declaration of internal war rounded up suspected terrorist supporters of ousted ex-President Juan D. Peron in raids throughout the country today.

The total number of prisoners taken in raids on Peronist hangouts was not announced, but it was believed to be in the hundreds.

Former Foreign Minister

Prominent prisoners were said to include former Foreign Minister Edelson Cavagna and Peronist youth leader Hector B. Lagomarsino. Unconfirmed reports said the unidentified "chief of the new terrorist movement" has been captured.

Provincial police, placed under army command Tuesday, synchronized their raids with the roundup of Peronist suspects in the capital.

President Arturo Frondizi's government, under army pressure to take effective action against terror-bombers in Argentina, invoked a law devised by Peron himself to declare "internal war" on his followers.

Proclaims Grave Emergency

A decree published Tuesday night proclaimed a "grave emergency" throughout Argentina, making the nation subject to the "state of war" law passed while Peron was president.

The decree makes terrorists subject to trial by military courts which could impose the death penalty on those whose bombs have killed one or more persons. The maximum penalty for terrorism in the civil courts is seven years imprisonment.

FRENCH EXECUTE REBEL

ALGIERS (UPI) — Algerian rebel Harir Djelloul Ben Mohamed was executed Tuesday by a French firing squad for the murder of a forest ranger last September.

South Police Crackdown On Negroes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than 500 Negroes have been arrested in the largest mass police crackdown since demonstrations against segregated eating facilities in the South began a month and a half ago.

The blanket arrests Tuesday led one state official of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People to charge that police were engaging in strong-arm, Fascist-like tactics.

Police at Orangeburg, S.C., used tear gas and fire hoses to quell an estimated 1,000 demonstrating students and arrested 350 of them. All were charged with breach of the peace and released under $10 bond each.

At Atlanta, in segregation-minded Georgia, 77 Negroes and 2 white youths were jailed in connection with sit-ins at 10 downtown cafeterias. The Negroes were released later on $300 bond each. The white youths were given 30-day jail terms.

Among those arrested was the Rev. A. D. Williams King, a brother of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro integration leader and exponent of passive resistance.

Arrests also occurred in two other South Carolina cities and at St. Augustine, Fla.

The Orangeburg arrests came after police tried to break up a protest march by about 1,000 students from South Carolina A. & T. and Claflin colleges. The students refused to disperse. Fire hoses were turned on about 300 of them and two tear gas canisters were exploded.

The Rev. H. P. Sharper, a Florence Baptist minister and president of the South Carolina NAACP Conference, said that because of "strong-arm, Fascist-like tactics" of peace officers "we conclude that appeal to federal agencies is our last resort."

In other South Carolina developments, 70 Negroes were arrested at Rock Hill as they picketed City Hall. Ten Negroes were arrested at Columbia and charged with trespassing at lunch counters in variety stores.

The Atlanta demonstrations were described as the largest simultaneous sit-ins yet staged in the South. The protests were held at cafeterias in the state Capitol, City Hall, the Courthouse, in two buildings where there are a number of federal agencies, at two railroad stations, two bus stations and a variety store.

Many of those taking part came from the city's six Negro colleges. All the Negroes were charged with disorderly conduct and refusal to leave premises when asked to do so—provisions of an act approved at the recent session of the Georgia Legislature. In addition 18 of them were charged under a law originally drawn to halt Ku Klux Klan activities and an old unlawful assembly act.

Shelter Of Highest Court Left Behind By Sen. Lusk

SALEM, Ore. (AP)—Hall Stoner Lusk, 76, is leaving the quiet and shelter of the Oregon Supreme Court for the U.S. Senate, Lusk says it should be exciting.

The departure, after 23 years on the court, Lusk says, is not without a twinge of regret.

"We're sheltered from public pressure, entirely different from the Legislature. The only pressure that's brought to bear on us is the pressure of argument and of brief."

"I realize, of course, that I'm getting into an entirely different field of activity. And so I welcome the chance to render public service there. Whether I can do it remains to be seen. I hope I can."

Lusk, a life-long Democrat, was appointed by Republican Gov. Mark Hatfield Tuesday to fill the vacancy left by the death of Sen. Richard Neuberger (D-Ore).

For Lusk, the return to Washington, D.C., will be sort of a homecoming. He was born there and attended Georgetown University.

Lusk came to Oregon in 1909 and set up a law practice in Portland. It was not a smashing success. Lusk says he went broke and "went to work stacking lumber."

But the law practice was resumed, successfully, and in 1936 he went on the State Circuit Court, to be named to the Supreme Court seven years later. He was last re-elected to a six-year term in 1956.

The races for the court positions were nonpartisan. Lusk and he only once ran on the Democratic party ticket. He recalled: "I ran for the Legislature in 1922. I almost was elected."

Some Democrats were nettled by Lusk's appointment, saying Neuberger's widow, Maurine, should have been given the post. But Mrs. Neuberger, who has entered the race to succeed her husband for a six-year term, said the appointment was a sound one, and added: "Judge Lusk is recognized as one of the most scholarly and capable of Oregon's Supreme Court judges."

Lusk's Senate term will be a short one, lasting only until the November general election. After that, Lusk says he may return here to be a justice pro-tem on the Supreme Court.

PRISONER, SCRAPER MISSING

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI)—Officials at Kilby Prison disclosed today that burglar Herbert Underwood escaped Monday night by driving from the prison on a huge road scraping machine owned by the state.

Underwood was seen maneuvering the unwieldy machine along a downtown street but neither he nor the road scraper has been found.

New Cracks Appear In GOP Unity

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — New cracks showed up today in the structure of Republican unity Vice President Richard M. Nixon has been laboring so hard to build.

Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) outlined in a Senate speech Tuesday a GOP conservative's idea of what the foreign policy program should be. It differed sharply from policies pursued by President Eisenhower.

Goldwater, who heads the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, had what he called "hard counsel" for both Eisenhower and Nixon. In some quarters his blast was interpreted as indicating conservatives will demand a strong voice in writing the party platform foreign affairs plank.

Goldwater advocated breaking off relations and negotiations with the Soviet Union. He proposed staging a "test of wills"—which he said could end in war—with the Soviets under conditions and in a location picked by the United States. He urged "risks on our terms, instead of on Communist terms."

There were more Goldwater suggestions. But these were enough to draw the fire of Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.), who calls himself a liberal. He said Goldwater's proposals sounded a lot like those which former Sen. William F. Knowland of California, once the GOP floor leader, used to make in the Senate.

Cooper said in an interview that "the worst thing that could happen right now would be to withdraw American recognition of Russia and to refuse to negotiate."

"I agree with Sen. Goldwater that world tensions are created only by the Russians and they could relax them at any time they choose," he said. "But the world is in danger because of those tensions and the only possible way to settle the issues is by negotiation."

Cooper said world opinion would not support American refusal to deal further with the Soviets, a view in which Sen. George D. Aiken (R-Vt.) concurred.

Aiken, a Senate Foreign Relations committee member who lists himself as a liberal, said he doesn't think Eisenhower or Nixon will follow Goldwater's advice on that score.

"I think the majority of Republicans recognize that we are going to have to continue to deal with a nation with which we disagree," Aiken said.

Goldwater admittedly aimed his remarks at Eisenhower. He said he had been writing his speech for some time and wanted to get it on the record before the forthcoming summit meeting. He said he would be happy if he impressed Nixon with his ideas.

In the vice president's camp the Goldwater speech apparently was regarded as another symptom of the conservative-liberal split in the party Nixon has been trying to heal.
