

Police Arrest Hospital Aide

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP)—Police say it was an attendant at a state mental hospital who painted swastikas on San Bernardino's only synagogue.

They said Robert E. Bowles, 24, also wrote "Rabbi Go Home" on the walls in incorrect German.

Police arrested Bowles Monday after a two-month investigation. They said they found at his home a collection of hand-drawn swastikas, a German automatic pistol, Nazi war medals, photographs of German soldiers and a black shirt from a German Nazi uniform.

Bowles was released on $1,500 bail pending arraignment on four counts of malicious mischief.

JERRY R. SEUTTER, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Seutter, 4826 Climax Avenue, enlisted in the Navy here recently. He is receiving basic training at San Diego.

Countryside Near Capital Site For Oddest Ranch

WASHINGTON (AP)—Five hundred thirteen acres of countryside near Washington will become one of the oddest ranches in the country. Monkeys may be one of the major livestock items.

The big cash crops, however, are likely to be mice, rats, guinea pigs, rabbits and hamsters.

The National Institutes of Health have bought acreage in a corner of Montgomery County, Md., known for the gentleman farms of wealthy commuters. For the institutes, the government's huge medical research facilities, it's an economy move.

The Institutes are heavy consumers of laboratory animals—more than 300,000 mice alone in 1959—and they are running out of space at their Bethesda, Md., headquarters.

Telling a House Appropriations subcommittee about plans for the animal farm, bought in January, NIH spokesmen were especially high on the outlook for cutting monkey costs.

At present NIH imports rhesus monkeys for experiments on animals resembling man. The monkeys cost $50 to $100 each, the supply is uncertain and the animal is hard to handle.

An NIH study showed it might be possible to breed on the farm marmoset monkeys that would do as well. "These plans are not firm," the study concluded with scientific caution.
